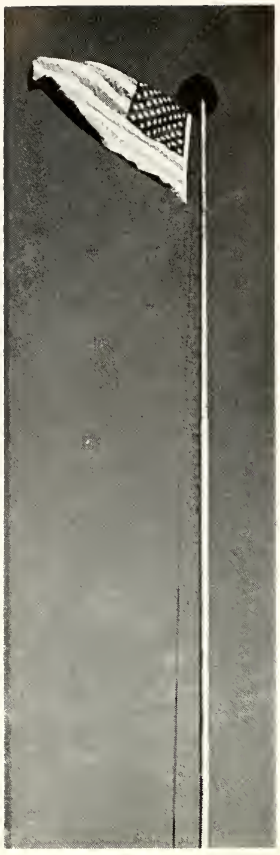
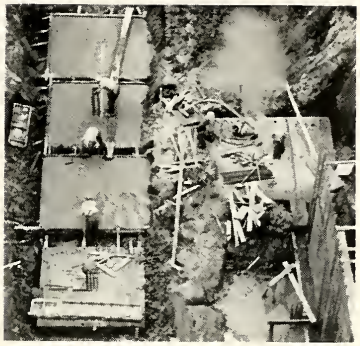
Bloomington, home to Wesleyan students for three fourths of the year . . . Boasting two movie houses, a couple of bowling alleys and numerous "other attractions," it seeks to entertain us. Downtown nearby, it provides opportunity for spending our amassed wealth, and the Public Library for other necessities of college survival . . . Lake Bloomington and, yea, Miller Park, it is a refuge to us . . . Hometown and final resting place of Stevenson . . . A town big enough to have too many "One-Way" streets and "No Parking" signs and small enough to share a huge celebration and to put up with a bunch of kooky college kids.



"The Rise and Fall of Illinois Wesleyan" could be the school's theme for the past year. Seeing the final demise of "Old Yeller" we shed a few tears of joy as we picked up souvenir bricks. After all, we must have something to remember our Arc de Triomphe a la Wesleyan . . .

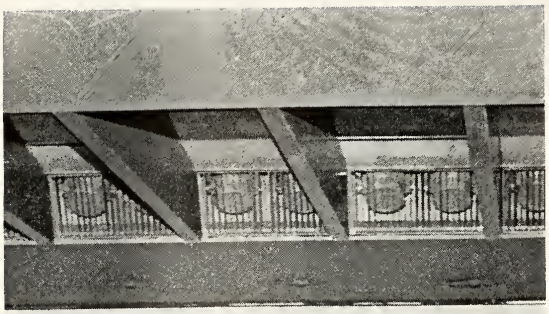
Going up? Munsell Hall, the Memorial Center addition, mounds and mounds of earth and the pitch of our voices as we tried to make ourselves heard above the din. Even the sound of music was subordinated by the roar of progress. The sound of silence, it seemed, existed only on record.

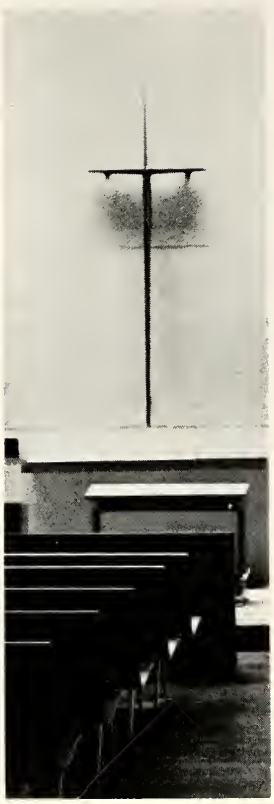


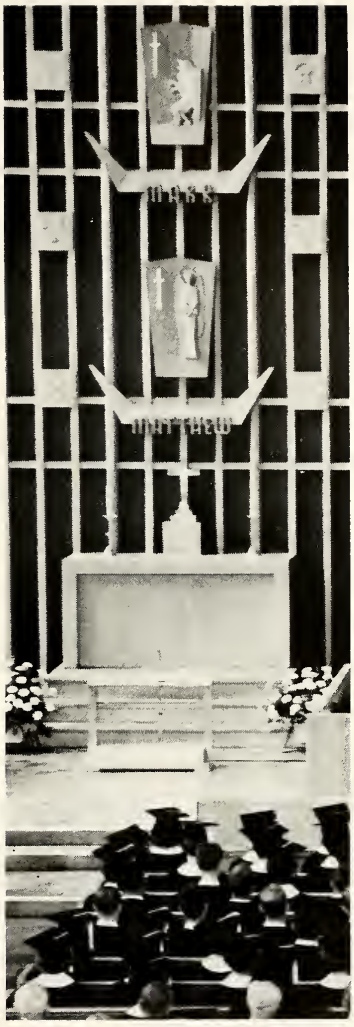
"In the world even the best things are no good without someone to act them out. The people call these actors 'great men.'

"The people little comprehend the great which is: the creative. But they understand all the actors and performers of great things."

Thus Spoke Zarathustra







Sometimes a dominating factor, sometimes only sandwiched in, religion at Illinois Wesleyan is a force, a challenge, a release, a refuge, an activity. This many-sided element takes the form of individuals, events, or spiritual quietness and meditation. Presser chimes call the worshipping faction to weekly chapel. Quiet corners call those in need of solace. Classes examine religion and sometimes explode long-held beliefs. Sometimes they repair them; sometimes they don't. But that is what makes religion exciting.

" 'I also know,' said Candide, 'that we must go and work in the garden.' 'You are quite right,' said Pangloss. 'When man was placed in the Garden of Eden, he was put there "to dress it and to keep it", to work, in fact; which proves that man was not born to an easy life.' 'We must work without arguing,' said Martin; 'that is the only way to make life bearable.' " And we add, "to make college possible."

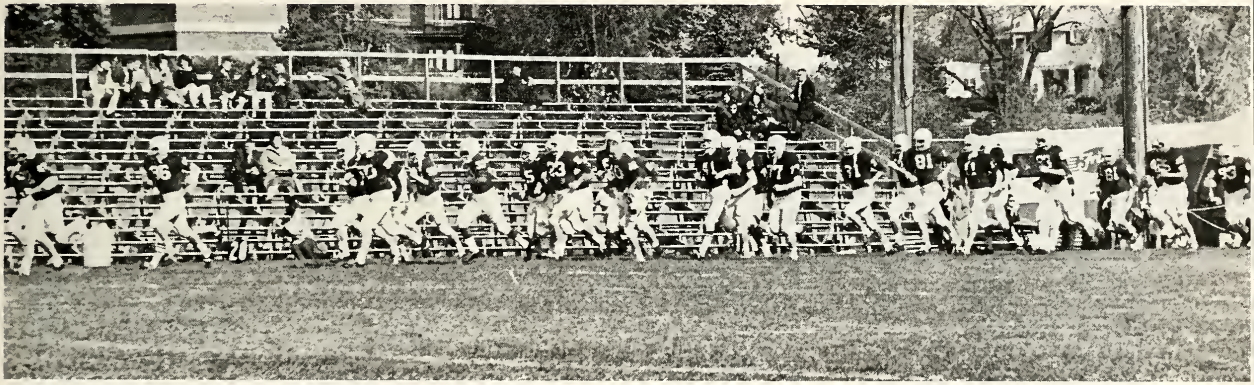
"It's cheer, cheer, the gang's all here. All out for Wesleyan." If we were to make a Wesleyan "Happiness Book" it might say that happiness is winning teams in a town called Kansas City . . . Happiness is school spirit, for once . . . Happiness is Friday afternoons . . . and "Batman" twice a week! ZOWIE! . . . Happiness is one day without hearing, "Will you please take your trays back to the racks?" . . . Happiness is winter break, summer break and coming back again . . .



"Flee, my friend, into your solitude." Thus spoke Zarathustra. And it's a hard thing to come by, that solitude. Sometimes we have to steal away into a quiet corner. Sometimes we retreat into ourselves. Sometimes we just walk away. Sometimes, though, our solitude might be better termed loneliness. It may be the self-imposed loneliness of hard work or, more often, the painful awareness of our estrangement. But sometimes solitude is a neutral thing. We just take advantage of it—and turn over and go to sleep.

Student Life--Conformity and Individuality

Student Work Day—A new way to earn money.

Student life covers all phases of a student's activities, running the gauntlet of human emotions. Many times it is nerve-wracking. Last minute cramming for an important exam, or all night typing sessions on that long term paper can make life hectic. There are also those endless hours of research in the library, when you would rather be anywhere but in that stuffy, somber building.

A lingering smile after a perfect date, walking across campus on a warm evening, gabbing at all-night sessions, attending meetings for special events on campus, hatching practical jokes to play on your roommate, rejoicing when you receive a check from home—these are all brief moments in your student life that blur together pleasantly.

The life of a student also includes those solitary moments which are necessary to every person. Those times which allow one to relax, think, or merely daydream. During those precious moments one gains the strength to continue with what often seems an unbearable schedule.

Life at college involves an introduction to new people, new concepts, and new situations. Life as a student at Wesleyan encompasses all the learning through experience that cultivates personal inner growth.

Spotlight on the Year's Events

1965-1966 marked another important phase in the growth of Illinois Wesleyan. Duration Hall, which had for many years stood as a symbol of Wesleyan's past, was demolished. As the bulldozer began its destructive task, a large number of faculty members and students gathered to watch the death of what was at one time one of Wesleyan's finest buildings.

In 1867 the need for adequate space called for the consideration of a new building. After reviewing all of the proposed plans, those for what was to become Old Main were decided upon. Built at a cost of one hundred thousand dollars, which had been raised for that purpose, "Old Main" was an inspiring structure. Situated on a site that is soon to be the location of the new library, it was five stories high with a tower at each corner.

Graduates of Hedding College who visited campus last fall watched their landmark torn down in the name of progress.

The arch of Duration Hall posed proudly for a final picture before demolition began.

THE CONTENTS of Duration Hall's cornerstone, including old newspapers and money, were uncovered when the arch was demolished.

Wesleyan Creates, Destroys Traditions

The fourteenth annual university catalogue was the first to bear an illustration of the new building. When Hedding College merged with Illinois Wesleyan, the official name of "Old Main" was changed to Hedding Hall. During the 1931 homecoming activities, copper plates bearing the inscription, "In honor of Hedding College 1850-1928" were placed on either side of the front entrance.

"Old Main" served as a classroom and administration building for almost seventy-five years. Then, on January 9, 1943 disaster struck. A fire which was caused by defective wiring destroyed the brick building, leaving only the blackened hull. Destroyed in the fire were the usual classroom furnishings, the Powell Museum, the Amie Chapel which contained portraits of Wesleyan's presidents, and many priceless records. One amazing result of the disaster was that the students did not miss one class because of the fire. When students returned to classes in the fall of 1944, they discovered that the basement of Hedding Hall had been roofed over and the name had once again been changed. This time it was appropriately called Duration Hall.

Although the main building was to be torn down, the arch which commemorated Hedding College was to be left standing, and was to be moved to the lawn behind McPherson Theater, over the Hedding bell. However, because of the age of the arch and the high cost of moving it, it too was destroyed. In the process the box which had been placed there when the corner stone was laid in 1870 was saved. Included among the contents of the box were a Bible, a Methodist Almanac, university catalogues for the years 1869 and 1870, city daily papers and other interesting information. After these were examined by several faculty members, they were placed in the display case in Holmes Hall where they could be viewed by interested students, faculty members, and visitors to our campus.

The end of Duration was only one phase of Wesleyan's building program for the year. Soon after students returned to campus in the fall, work was started on the addition to the new Munsell Hall, a girls' dormitory, and on the addition to the Memorial Center. Good weather aided the workmen, and the sights and smells of a construction job accompanied students as they crossed campus. Frequent articles also kept students informed on the progress of the work. Also included in this year's building program were the completion and dedication of Stevenson Hall, the planning and building of three new fraternity houses, and plans for the destruction of Old North, Wesleyan's first building. Wesleyan's growth can be seen in her building program.

Wesleyan experienced several firsts this year. One of these was the appearance of the Wesleyan Titan at the first home football game which was with ISU. After this he entered the stadium before each game in a chariot pulled by two Roman slaves. With torches blazing, he prayed to the gods of the North, South, East and West for victory, and his appeals were answered.

Also in the fall, Wesleyan was privileged to host the First Issue Ceremonies of the Adlai E. Stevenson Commemorative Stamp. Members of the Stevenson family were present as well as dignitaries representing the United Nations, President Johnson and state and city government officials. Wesleyan students served as ushers and greeters, and the Music School provided the instrumentalists for the ceremony.

The Lettermen entertained students during Fall Festival.

Wesleyan's new Titan mascot, whose identity was unknown to the students, lighted the victory torch before each football game.

The Phoenix Atmosphere For Thought

Also new on campus this year was the Phoenix, Wesleyan's own coffeehouse. After much discussion and planning, work was begun, and the small store next to the Memorial Gymnasium was converted into a place where students could gather to talk and relax. The entire project was planned and carried out by the student body. A contest was held to name it, and Cathy Erftenbeck's selection, the Phoenix, was announced as the winner on opening night. From the time the doors opened on January 14, the coffeehouse has been an overwhelming success, not only for Wesleyan students but also those from ISU. Offering a wide variety of teas, coffees, and soft drinks, the Ruthenberger, and pastry, the Phoenix is not only a place to relax, but it also served as an informal classroom, especially during short term. In the evening students had the opportunity to see their fellow students perform. Folk singing, dramatic presentations, and comic monologues were some of the more popular forms of entertainment.

Kris Kubatsky was one of the talented students who entertained at the Phoenix. Folk-singing was only one of the types of entertainment that the coffeehouse offered throughout the year.

SUMMER STOCK PRODUCTIONS, such as "Pajama Game," provided both experience for the students and enjoyment for the audiences.

A HIGH SCHOOL science teacher works with IWU's equipment during the summer study program.

Summer Programs At Wesleyan

About 80 liberal arts students were enrolled in the third year of Wesleyan's unique summer study plan. Students studied intensively in groups for one week before separating for independent work. Select students who work well alone were encouraged to participate in this program.

For over thirty years music students have been offered a six-week course. This year approximately 40 students presented concerts including "Collegium Musicum," a program emphasizing early musical instruments such as the harpsichord. Predominately upperclass students are enrolled for six hours of credit; course offerings rotate each year.

Drama majors may engage in eight weeks' work with the Summer Stock Theatre for eight hours of credit. This year about half of the enrollment were Wesleyan students during the regular school term. Five productions, including "Pajama Game" and "Come Blow Your Horn" were presented. Dr. John Ficca, one of the directors, commented that they were "highly successful and well received by the community."

High school mathematics and science teachers qualify for a Master of Science Teaching Degree after completing three consecutive summers of study at Wesleyan and writing a thesis. This year 59 teachers from 19 states have enrolled in the National Science Foundation project.

Seniors Receive Long-Awaited Diplomas

Four years of long, hard work were culminated for the members of the class of 1965 on Sunday, June 6. At 5:30 p.m., to the traditional strains of "Pomp and Circumstance," the 106th commencement exercises began on the lawn of McPherson Theatre. C. Virgil Martin, the chief executive officer of Carson Pirie Scott, gave the annual address.

Graduates' fathers who were ministers participated in the exercises by giving the invocation and benediction. Although the cloudy day had threatened rain, the cloudburst held off until Mr. Martin had presented his dynamic, thought-provoking speech. After the first group of diplomas had been awarded, families and friends of the graduates had to run for shelter or risk becoming drenched in the typical Midwestern downpour. By the end of the commencement exercises, President Bertholf had presented a total of 201 long-sought degrees to the proud new alumni.

The busy graduation week-end began on the Saturday immediately preceding Commencement. It featured various events, including reunion luncheons and dinners, all of which were well-attended. On Sunday, following the annual senior breakfast, at which the unengaged sucked lemons, prospective graduates journeyed to Wesley Methodist Church for the traditional Baccalaureate Service.

Orientation and Registration Confusion

The summer orientation program which was expanded this year, introduced students and their parents to the university's policies, requirements, and social life. While the new freshmen were taking tests, the adults met with Deans Meierhofer and Ruthenberg. In the fall orientation continued as students toured the library, heard student leaders, learned about Greek life, attended a tea for new students, and again met with Deans Meierhofer and Ruthenberg. Students were now acquainted with Illinois Wesleyan.

Registration filled with questions and waiting came next. Having your picture taken, consulting with your advisor, picking up class cards, and filling out numerous forms are just a few of the steps in the time consuming process. But after having finally paid your tuition, room and board you are finally enrolled and ready to begin a new and exciting semester.

Registration appears to be a serious business for everyone involved.

Homecoming Activities

Intrigued by the idea of Wesleyan's having a new mascot, the Homecoming committee decided to present the Titan traveling to scenic spots in various states of the Union. This idea was carried out in the float themes, the dorm decorations, and the campus decorations.

Dale LaGow and Joan Weer headed the committee which was responsible for planning the 1965 Homecoming festivities. Under the direction of this committee, the week-end activities included: the selection and presentation of the queen; the pep rally, the bonfire, the chariot race, and the campus beast contest on Friday night. Saturday brought the annual parade, the reunion luncheon, a decorated campus, and the dance which climaxed the week-end's events and featured the presentation of awards. The presence of Fred Young, in whose honor the luncheon was held, and some of his friends and classmates, who received special invitations, added to the nostalgia of the week-end.

Another innovation was placing campus decorations which further depicted the theme, along both sides of University Street. The Homecoming play, "Mary, Mary," a laugh-filled success, and the Titans' 21-7 victory over North Central, added the final touches to a perfect week-end.

Floats and Decs

Saturday morning, after the float judging, the 1965 Homecoming Parade began its route through the Wesleyan campus and Bloomington's business district. Featured in the parade were Mr. Fred Young, a distinguished alumnus to whom Homecoming was dedicated, administration officials, including President Lloyd Bertholf, Homecoming Queen Becky McLaughlin and her court, the IWU Marching Titans, cheerleaders, high school bands, various equestrian units, and the fraternity-sorority floats. The colorful float from Theta Chi-Delta Omicron-Sigma Alpha Iota was announced as the winner of the competition, representing Kentucky in the Titan Travels theme. The parade route was further enhanced by the eye-catching house decorations put up by the dormitories, with Pfeiffer and Franklin Halls announced as winners in that competition.

Saturday afternoon, Edgar M. Stevenson Hall, new home of the Wesleyan Collegiate School of Nursing, was dedicated and opened for tours.

Selection of '65 Queen

The first step in the selection of the 1965 Homecoming Queen was the choice of one girl to represent each sorority and dormitory housing unit by the girls in each living group. The eleven candidates chosen were: Nancy Lyn Brown, a junior biology major representing Sigma Kappa; Nancy Lynn Brown, a sophomore art major representing Pfeiffer Hall; Phyllis Budzynski, a sophomore drama major from Blackstock, Adams, and DeMotte dormitories; Cathy Erftenbeck, a junior drama major representing Ferguson Hall; and Cherie Egbers, a senior music major from Sigma Alpha Iota. Other candidates included Janice Gouwens of Kappa Delta, a junior elementary education major; Diana Hulse, a junior music education major representing Delta Omicron; Trudy Rippe from Gulick Hall, a sophomore majoring in drama and English; Becky McLaughlin, a junior drama major representing Kappa Kappa Gamma; Merry Carol Pruett, a junior elementary major from Alpha Gamma Delta; and Ann Robinson, a sophomore nursing major from Alpha Omicron Pi. Thursday evening, following the campus-wide male vote for a favorite candidate, the girls attended the Queen's Banquet, during and after which they were evaluated by four judges.

Varied Weekend Events

Following the tabulation of the campus vote and the judges' decision, the winning candidate, Becky McLaughlin, representing Kappa Kappa Gamma, was crowned to reign as Illinois Wesleyan's 1965 Homecoming Queen, during the Friday night festivities.

The Homecoming game Saturday afternoon pitted the Titans against the rival team from North Central. A capacity crowd of students, alumni, and parents watched as the Big Green defeated the adversary in an exciting game.

The festivities of Illinois Wesleyan's 1965 Homecoming were culminated in the annual Homecoming dance for all students and alumni, held in the Fred Young Fieldhouse. Stan Rubin's Band was featured at this event. During the course of the evening, Queen Becky McLaughlin and her Court were presented to the group.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Young are honored at the luncheon commemorating Mr. Young's fifty years of association with Illinois Wesleyan.

Alum Luncheon

Friends and alumni of Illinois Wesleyan were able to meet together during the Alumni Luncheon, held in the Memorial Center on Saturday. Special guests at the gathering included administrators, the Homecoming Queen and her court, last year's queen, Peggy White, and Mr. Fred Young, who was honored during this year's Homecoming festivities.

After his graduation from Illinois Wesleyan in 1915, Mr. Young began his career with the Bloomington Daily Pantagraph and was later named sports editor of the publication. During this period, Mr. Young also officiated at various sports events, including local high school championships, Big Ten basketball and football games, and National Football League games. It was because of his impressive record in the field of sports and the respect he has earned from people connected with sports and Illinois Wesleyan University that Homecoming 1965 was dedicated to him.

Parents' Days

Mothers who visited the Wesleyan campus on May 2 enjoyed the theme, "Art for Mother's Sake." Following the noon banquet in their honor, mothers were invited to attend programs presented by the art, drama, and music departments in the Fine Arts Schools. Highlights included a preview of the "Admirable Crichton," a duet by Ralph Dial and John Feliksiac from the "Pearl Fishers," and a display of paintings in the Faculty Lounge. Later in the afternoon a reception was held for the faculty and parents.

"My Dad—Big Man on Campus" was the theme for the Dad's Day program on November 13, of which Jan Stackhouse was the general chairman. Fathers of IWU students attended regular, fifty minute classes directed by the university professors. Among those classes offered were art, drama, music, nursing, psychology, foreign language, teacher education, physics, biology, political science and humanities. A barbecue for dads and faculty was held at the Fred Young Fieldhouse, followed by the Titans' final game of the season which was played victoriously against Millikin. The half-time show was presented by Millikin and IWU Marching Bands, after which fathers of the football players, wearing their sons' numbers, were introduced. A faculty coffee hour followed the game, and concluding the day's program was a folk concert featuring the "Clef-Dwellers."

Convocations

The President's Convocation began the fall term with a welcome to new and old students alike.

Dr. Pressley C. McCoy, president of the Central States College Association, spoke on Founders' Day of the future of church-related colleges. Among the other speakers featured on campus was Sidney J. Harris, columnist for the Chicago Daily News, who spoke on the topic "Modern Man's Dilemma". Bill Veeck, a well-known columnist in the sports world, spoke on sportsmanship. The appearance of the controversial Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. in February attracted citizens of surrounding areas as well as IWU and ISU students. Dr. King analyzed the present status of the racial issue and concluded with a question and answer period.

Included in the departmental lecturers were Dr. Stephen Wright, president of Fisk University, and Dr. Bothmer, an Egyptologist who lectured to the social science classes. John Malcolm Brinnin, poet and author, also addressed Wesleyan students.

Bill Veeck, popular sports figure, was this year's first convo. speaker.

Memorial Center

The expansion of the Student Center has been one of the major projects taken on by Illinois Wesleyan this year. The Center is scheduled to be ready for use in the fall of 1966. The budget for this expansion project is $1,600,000. In addition to expansion, the Center as it is now will undergo complete remodeling. The aim of the new Center is to improve food service for the student body and center its interest on individual needs. The new food services will be located upstairs on the level of Memorial Lounge. Incorporated into this area will be an ultra-modern kitchen, four serving lines, and a seating capacity for 1200 students. The present downstairs of the "Commons" will undergo major changes. The Dug Out will be expanded to include half of the present dining area. Due to this expansion, the Dug Out will be able to be used for parties, art shows, and lounges. Despite the inconvenience experienced during the expansion process, this project will benefit the entire student body, faculty, and alumni.

Hub of Campus Activity

Throughout the year Memorial Center is open for student and faculty use. The Center houses the Student Senate offices, Memorial Lounge, the "Commons," the Dug Out, and various other rooms for meeting purposes. This past year the Center had been the scene of dinners, sponsored by campus and off-campus groups; and dances such as the Grind sponsored by the Student Union Commission. At Christmas time the Commons was decorated appropriately and the students were served the traditional turkey dinner. During the week of the play, "The Would-Be Gentleman," the Commons was decorated in French style achieving the affect of a canopied outdoor cafe, and the students were treated to a meal of French cuisine.

Foreign Students

This year Illinois Wesleyan has six foreign students representing five countries enrolled in classes. Dean Meierhofer serves as a special advisor to all of these students.

Priscilla Araya is a senior French and English major from Chile. Upon graduation she plays to marry and remain in the United States. Josephine Chiza is a junior history major from Southern Rhodesia. After graduation she hopes to teach in Rhodesia. Also attending Wesleyan is Pak-Wai Wu a psychology major. He is a junior from Hong Kong.

Two students hail from Japan. Shohei Tokuda is doing additional undergraduate work in economics. He holds a B.A. degree in economics from his home university, Wasedu in Japan. Also from Japan is George Saito, a freshman in the School of Liberal Arts. George is an American citizen and at the present time his parents are missionaries in Kobe, Japan. George's father is an IWU graduate. Malaysia is the home of the sixth student, Kon-Swee Chen. Kon-Swee is a sophomore pre-med student.

Exchange Students

Another enriching aspect of the Wesleyan campus is its student Exchange Program. This broad-minded endeavor sends students meeting the necessary qualifications to Drew University in Madison, New Jersey, or to the American University in Washington, D.C. for a semester of specialized study. Those who attend Drew University observe and study international organization through direct contact with the United Nations and other agencies in the metropolitan area of New York. The participants in the Washington Semester study American national government through interviews and lectures from top government officials as well as from observing the legislative and government processes in action. Along with the first hand experience and contacts, students attend regular university classes and are housed on campus. The honor students chosen to participate in this worthwhile project should be commended on their eagerness to learn and their fine representation of our campus.

The addition of the short term program this year, gave many students an opportunity to visit other campuses, or take extended field trips. While off campus, these students could pursue more deeply the subjects which interested them, by studying in the natural environment of the subject. Students of Indian lore were able to study in South Dakota, those interested in the United Nations saw it in operation in New York. Nurses worked in different hospital settings, and one student visited archaeological digs in Peru.

Developing Themselves In Active Membership

Phyllis Munro proudly becomes an Alpha Lambda Delta scholar.

College life is not all studying; students at IWU also find time to participate in various organizations on campus. They are designed to appeal to a myriad of interests. Some are honorary with elected membership while others are open to all who are interested. The journalism, business, biology, drama, music, religion, and education departments have one or more clubs for those who are interested in these fields. There are also those such as Green Medallion, Egas, Blue Key, Phi Kappa Phi, and Alpha Lambda Delta which honor outstanding scholastic or leadership ability.

For those students who are concerned with student government, Student Senate and its various commissions and committees are available. Students interested in recreational activities are invited to join Terrapins, Orchesis, Outing Club, or WRA. For those who desire to help promote school spirit there is cheerleading or W Club. IEO broadens the selection with both national and international activities. These organizations not only provide fun, entertainment, and relaxation, but they help develop leadership and citizenship qualities. In short, they enable students to become well-rounded individuals.

Student Senate

Under the leadership of the executive committee, the Student Senate initiated several new projects. To improve communication at Senate meetings, the commission heads and executive committee met bi-weekly. A special committee was also set up to study the effectiveness of the new Senate reapportionment. A new Senate publication, a booklet entitled Students in Action, explained the structure and purpose of the Senate.

Other activities included the sponsorship of the new and controversial coffeehouse. Fall Festival replaced Spring Festival and thus added another concert to the series previously sponsored by the Senate. Other accomplishments included an exchange program with the ISU Union Board and sponsorship of the Adlai E. Stevenson Memorial Lecture Series Fund Drive in co-operation with ISU and the Bloomington-Normal communities. This year the fine arts films, another Student Senate project, greatly increased in popularity.

Alpha Lambda Delta

Alpha Lambda Delta, honorary academic society for freshman women, is an active organization on campus. Members received campus visitors and conducted tours during Fall Festival. Alpha Lambda Delta also hosted prospective members during New Student Week and held a Smartee Party after hours in the Dug-Out later in the year. The purpose of these activities was to acquaint freshmen with the symbolic lighted torch and the colors of red, white, and gold which stand for the high standards of character and scholarship of the group.

Phi Kappa Phi

Each year a select group of seniors is chosen for membership in Phi Kappa Phi. Established in 1922, it is the second oldest honorary society on campus. The objectives of the group are the recognition and encouragement of superior scholarship in all academic endeavors. Those elected to Phi Kappa Phi are campus and community leaders who are accepted to membership by receiving a three-fourths vote of students and faculty members. The national society budgets part of its income awarding fellowships for first-year graduate study.

Blue Key is a national honorary recognition and service society which was organized at Illinois Wesleyan in 1943. Every semester its members are selected from the men of the junior and senior classes who rank in the upper half of their class and are outstanding in scholarship, activities, fine arts, athletics, or religious activities.

The organization, which has as its motto "Leadership and Service," does much to promote its standards and present an outstanding image for Wesleyan, and each year takes full charge of soliciting blood donors and supervising the activities. Also part of the group's service is to assist Egas in ushering at all-school convocations.

Egas is a local honorary and service society for women. Its members are chosen each spring from the junior class; however, one girl each year receives the honor of membership in her sophomore year. Newly-elected members are easily recognizable because they wear long black robes the day after being taken into Egas.

Membership qualifications are excellence in scholarship, high standards of character, and outstanding service to the school. The organization was founded on Wesleyan's campus in 1937. As members of a service society, Egas girls assist the men of Blue Key in conducting the annual Red Cross Blood Drive and ushering at all-school convocations.

Green Medallion Sophomore Honorary

Green Medallion, founded on Wesleyan's campus in 1941, is a local honorary recognition society for sophomore students who have participated widely in activities, displayed standards of high character, given of their time and energies to Illinois Wesleyan, and maintained at least a 2.5 accumulative average. New members are elected in the spring by the members of the organization.

Last spring forty sophomores met these qualifications and were initiated into Green Medallion. Dr. Jerry Stone gave the address at the Initiation Banquet at which time the new members were given their certificates of membership. They were also given green and white ribbons, representing the colors of the society, to wear as a means of recognition on campus.

Mr. Lee Short was reappointed as faculty advisor. The officers for 1965 were Greg Dell, President; Mike Coates, Vice-President; and Gwen Gebhard, Secretary.

A new precedent was set in the spring of 1966. The practice was begun of giving honorary membership in Green Medallion to one faculty member each year.

Greg Dell and advisor Lee Short review future Green Medallion plans.

Intercultural Exchange Organization

Newly formed this year, under the leadership of Dr. Wendell Hess and Dr. Jerry Stone, the IEO has been an extremely active group on campus.

The main purpose of IEO is to promote "cultural exchange" among IWU students, as well as with students and professors all over the Midwest. The European committee is sending seven students to European countries this summer for study, work, and travel. The Latin American committee will send thirteen students on work projects in Latin American villages.

A program on the Peace Corps was presented by the Peace Corps committee directed by Judy Carlson. IEO also undertook the collection of over 2,000 pounds of used textbooks for Asian students.

IEO has resumed the sponsorship of the Little United Nations Assembly this year with the help of Dr. John Faust. Last October, IEO sent fourteen delegates to Beloit College to attend a conference on Southeast Asia. In February, delegates traveled to Indiana University for a LUNA program. IEO sponsored its own week-end conference in April, entitled "The Winds of Change: The Quest for Nationhood in Africa." This conference involved one hundred and fifty colleges and scholars and statesmen from all over the world.

Alpha Tau Delta Nursing Honor Fraternity

Alpha Tau Delta, the newest member of Professional Panhellenic, was instituted at Wesleyan on May 16, 1964. A national women's fraternity, Alpha Tau Delta is for nursing majors attending colleges with Basic Degree Programs accredited by the National League for Nursing. To be eligible for rush, a girl must be a sophomore nursing major, display a professional attitude toward nursing, and have a 2.5 average in the previous semester.

There are forty-four charter members and four honorary members of Alpha Tau Delta. Honorary members are Jane Gordon, Dr. Mary E. Shanks, Dean Anne Meierhofer, and Annabel Hartranft. The president for 1965-66 is Darlene Jenks.

Yellow, white, blue, and gold are Alpha Tau Delta's colors. The official flower is the yellow rose, and the jewel is the pearl. The motto of Alpha Tau Delta is "United in Service," and its purpose is to help raise the standards of nursing education.

Alpha Tau Delta members serve at dedication of redecorated Stevenson Hall.

DO's ENJOY SINGING together even when not in a practice room.

Delta Omicron

Sigma Chapter of Delta Omicron is one of 98 collegiate and alumnae chapters. In the early fall, they were very happy to receive the Chapter award, an honorable mention for outstanding achievement in music activities.

Every year the DO's enjoy a beautiful Spring Formal and a very special May Banquet held by the Alumnae Chapter in honor of the seniors from ISU and IWU chapters.

The chapters of Delta Omicron met together in August at a National Convention in Pennsylvania. All who attended enjoyed a very busy week of concerts presented by Alumnae and Collegiate Chapters, Delta Omicron Scholarship winners, Korean Chapters, and non-member scholarship winners. There was also a performance of the winning music composition from international competition.

The DO's also find time in their busy schedules to sing at the Chanute Air Base and to raise the money for a fifty-dollar scholarship to be presented to a music student in our school who meets the qualifications.

Pi Kappa Delta

Illinois Alpha Chapter of Pi Kappa Delta is the oldest honorary fraternity on the Illinois Wesleyan campus. Members of the national honorary forensic fraternity are selected from students and instructors who have taken part in a number of intercollegiate contests. The fraternity consists of three orders: debate, discussion, and oratory. The order of oratory includes students who have participated in interpretation, extemporaneous speaking, choral reading, and after-dinner speaking. Wesleyan has had much success in tournaments both on our campus and at other colleges. This year Pi Kap attended tournaments in Wisconsin, Missouri, and Nebraska, as well as many in Illinois. The Pi Kap Provincial Tournament at Luther College in Iowa was the highlight of the season.

Illinois Wesleyan's chapter is sponsored by Dr. Robinson, professor of speech, who is also in charge of interpretation. Mr. Burt, also of the speech department, is the head of debate, and Mr. Carpenter is in charge of other individual events. The fraternity is devoted to the ideal of free speech—the art of persuasion, beautiful and just.

Assemblage
New Art Fraternity

Wesleyan's new local honorary art fraternity, Assemblage, was established this October as a society devoted to the promotion of art and its appreciation on campus. Assemblage members are elected on the basis of academic and artistic achievement and on the degree of interest in their field. The new organization is similar to Delta Phi Delta, national art fraternity, in its purposes and activities.

This year Assemblage has sponsored two major sales and exhibitions and smaller bi-weekly hangings in the television lounge. In addition, the organization has supplied Shaw Hall and the dormitories with a new selection of paintings.

The two major shows provide an opportunity for all Wesleyan students, art majors and non-art majors alike, to exhibit their talent to the community and to the campus. The proceeds from these shows, which are very successful, also provide Assemblage with the greatest part of its funds, to be used in the purchase of works for the school's collection.

Beta Beta Beta Biology Honorary

Tri-Beta honors those students who show special interest and ability in the field of biology. The organization functions to promote biological research and to advance scientific knowledge. In order to become an active member, it is necessary to maintain a cumulative average higher than the school average and to have at least ten hours of biology. To other interested students Beta Beta Beta extends provisional membership.

This national honorary biological fraternity was founded in 1922 as an affiliate of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The Illinois Wesleyan chapter is in its third year. With their advisor, Dr. Kulfinski, the members of Beta Beta Beta have held informal meetings, continued in service projects for the biology department, provided tutors, and sponsored lectures by visiting professors.

Alpha Kappa Psi Business Honorary

Delta Psi Chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi was established on Illinois Wesleyan's campus in 1958. A national professional business fraternity for men, Alpha Kappa Psi's membership includes students majoring in Business Administration, Economics, or Insurance who have met certain scholastic standards.

Throughout the year, guest speakers from various fields of the business world have visited the chapter to share personal experiences in their respective careers. Also included in this year's agenda was a field trip to St. Louis, where members toured several manufacturing and commercial firms.

One of the highlights of the year was the opening of the "AKPsi Room" in the Administration Building. The office, which serves as a study area and a meeting place, also houses typewriters and adding machines for the use of its members.

Membership into AKPsi is gained through invitation only. Pledges must pass a test and write a paper on personal business ethics preceding this initiation.

Don Marsh and Gary Hawbecker exchange the AKPsi president's gavel.

Student Education Association-Future Teachers

The Student Education Association better known on the Illinois Wesleyan campus as SEA was under the direction of N. Emerson Miller this year. SEA which is a branch of both the Illinois Education Association and the National Education Association is a professional organization whose membership is open to all those who intend to engage in the pursuit of a career in education. Members are given the opportunity to receive instruction, to give advice, or to share experiences at their regular monthly meetings. These served as a source of information, hope, and enjoyment for those who shared similar feelings or would be doing their practice teaching in the future.

Kappa Delta Pi

Kappa Theta Chapter of Kappa Delta Pi is the honorary education fraternity which was founded by Dr. Paul Ross, former head of the Teacher Education Department at Illinois Wesleyan University, on January 26, 1965. The fraternity is composed of those students demonstrating scholastic excellence and dedication to their chosen career in education.

Activities during first semester included various speakers in the field of education, a picnic, a bake sale, and the initiation of twelve members in November.

During the second semester, Kappa Delta Pi members were busy selling Kappa Delta Pi pins, holding a car wash in the spring, and participating in the initiation of members which was also held in the spring. Other highlights included a campus poll resulting in a panel discussion on the pros and cons of the long-short term semester.

Marching Titans in Action

The greatest highlight of this year for the Illinois Wesleyan Marching Titans was the sporting of new band uniforms. The eighty-piece band is under the direction of Mr. Maurice Willis and is led through formations and precision drills by Bill Hertel. Membership in the Marching Titans is open to any student who is interested and who can play an instrument.

Good weather enabled the band to perform during the half-time of each football game and to march in the annual Homecoming parade. A show involving a lion hunt and featuring some of the recent popular instrumental hits such as "Baby Elephant Walk" and "A Swinging Safari" proved to be popular with the spectators. The half-time show for Homecoming honored the Homecoming Queen and her court.

Also, during the basketball season the Marching Band provided entertainment before each home game.

THE MARCHING BAND files off of the football field, proudly displaying their new uniforms.

THE BAND MAY look disorganized in this picture, but their half-time formations were well-planned and well-executed.

BILL HERTELL, drum major, directs one of the original and entertaining half-time programs given by the Marching Titans.

Concert Band

Illinois Wesleyan's Concert Band, under the direction of Mr. John McGrosso, is open to all qualified students of the university. Tryouts are held each fall for admission to this group. Besides presenting two concerts each year, one held during the fall and the other during the spring, the band spends many long but rewarding hours preparing for an annual spring tour. This year their tour took place during spring break and carried this talented organization to various high schools throughout the state of Illinois.

Students warm up in preparation for an important rehearsal.

University Orchestra

Under the direction of Mr. Mario Mancinelli, the Illinois Wesleyan University Orchestra presents three major concerts each year. Any student may participate in this activity although most of the forty-five members are students in the music school. Membership is obtained by those with prior learning on some musical instrument through Mr. Mancinelli's approval. The director then holds auditions for chair placements.

The Orchestra has been active on our campus for about seventeen years. Members play separately and in a group for many events both on and off campus. As a group the Orchestra presented the Unfinished Symphony for the Contemporary Music Symposium last March. They provided the accompaniment for the opera and combined with Chapel Choir and Collegiate Choir for Mozart's Mass in C Minor. According to Mr. Mancinelli, they play, "traditional music, standard literature."

Collegiate Choir

The fifty-voice Collegiate Choir, under the direction of Mr. David Nott, is a select group of students chosen on the basis of open auditions held in the fall.

This year the Collegiate Choir took its annual tour immediately following short term. After giving concerts in Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Indiana, the choir presented its final concert in Westbrook Auditorium on February 3. One of the highlights of the tour was the premiere performance of a work commissioned for the choir by Bernard Heiden of Indiana University.

Before the annual tour, the choir sang for the dedication of the sanctuary of First Methodist Church in Champaign, and for a meeting of the Fort-Nightly Club in Chicago. During the month of December, the choir was heard on the National Radio Pulpit. In March, they sang for the Contemporary Music Symposium and gave the closing concert for the Festival of Religion and Arts in Decatur. On April 17, the choir combined with the chapel choir and university orchestra to present Mozart's "Grand Mass in C Minor."

Chapel Choir

Under the direction of Mr. David Nott, Chapel Choir is the largest choral group on Illinois Wesleyan's campus. It is open to all university students who are interested in participating. In addition to singing at weekly Chapel Services, choir members also participate in the annual Christmas Musicale. In the spring, the Chapel Choir and Collegiate Choir combine to present a complete oratorio for their fellow students, faculty, and administration. This year they presented Mozart's Grand Mass in C.

Chamber Singers

The Chamber Singers, often called the "best of the Collegiate Choir," is a select group chosen from members of Collegiate Choir. Under Mr. David Nott's direction they entertain students, faculty, and members of the community as well as people in other sections of the country. The annual tour with the Collegiate Choir took them to cities in northeastern and middle western states. On campus the Chamber Singers are best known to their fellow students through their performance in the annual Christmas Musicale. This spring they also performed in the annual contemporary music symposium.

MENC

Professional Panhellenic

Music Educators' National Conference is a voluntary, nonprofit organization which limits its membership to Junior and Senior music majors who are planning a career in music education. It seeks to make its members aware of the great possibilities in the teaching profession and to inform them of the latest trends in the field of music education. It represents every phase of musical education at all types of educational institutions. The officers are Lesley Wright, president; Martha Watson, vice-president; and Janice Stackhouse, secretary.

The professional sororities' representatives from Sigma Alpha Iota, Delta Omicron, and Alpha Tau Delta compose the membership of Professional Panhellenic Council. This council seeks to promote co-operation and maintain high standards in the professional fields. Several combined activities are held, one of these being a breakfast for all interested students at the beginning of each school year.

MSM

The Methodist Student Movement is an ecumenical group which provides a varied program for all students interested in religious activities. During the past year MSM has been under the leadership of Gary Chapman, president, a council of about twenty members, and Chaplain White. Its Sunday evening programs have featured out-of-town guests, faculty speakers, and panel discussions; they have centered around such general topics as the future of the Church, the Christian Ethic, and social problems such as drug addiction and sexual deviancy. Also included in these weekly meetings is a light supper. Deputation teams sponsored by the MSM are the well-known Wesleyan Players, a worship team, and a workshop team. The Social Concerns Commission has provided such community service projects as trips to the State Mental Hospital in Chicago and visiting homes for the elderly. "Our Campus Searches," discussions featuring campus leaders, has also been organized by the MSM. Still another part of the MSM is the Commission on Missions and Education which has set up small fellowship "cell groups" where the discussion centers around religion, prayer, social sciences, or Bible study. All interested students are welcome to join the MSM and any of its activities.

Religion-Oriented Groups

As an organization for women whose chosen field is church-related vocations, Chi Rho is the feminine counterpart of Episcopoi. Pursuing a similar program, it has weekly luncheon meetings following Chapel. Chapel speakers are the usual guests of Chi Rho, where they lead discussions and exchange ideas with the group. Outstanding visitors to the Wednesday noon fellowships this year included Dr. Kyle Haseldon, editor of The Christian Century, and the members of The Bishop's Company from Burbank, California. Chi Rho is a group of women with a goal of personal involvement and fulfillment.

The Episcopoi are men who are planning careers in religion, particularly in the church-related fields. Meeting weekly at the lunch hour following Chapel, they pursue a program of Christian fellowship, learning, and understanding. Taking advantage of the Phoenix, IWU's new coffeehouse, the group held their luncheon meetings there, conversing with visiting Chapel speakers, seminary representatives, and faculty members; discussing common concerns and questions; and enjoying fellowship. The informal atmosphere of the Phoenix encourages a free exchange of ideas, especially with visitors. Men bound by unity of purpose and conviction, the Episcopoi exist as a group of dedicated men.

Masquers and Theta Alpha Phi

Membership in Masquers, a campus organization for those interested in dramatics, is obtained on the basis of points received for work in the various aspects of the art of the theatre. One need be no more than interested in the theatre and willing to work for it if he wishes to be a member of Masquers. The organization meets at various times throughout the year and works toward the accomplishment of such projects as the fine arts reading theatre, whose performances may be seen every month at McPherson Theatre. Membership in Masquers encourages the interested student to continue in his pursuit of drama and to work toward possible membership in the national dramatics fraternity, Theta Alpha Phi.

Members of Theta Alpha Phi are those who have shown excellence in any of the several facets of the theatre, including acting, directing, costuming, lighting, and writing. Those who obtain membership in the Illinois Beta Chapter at Wesleyan are those who have devoted themselves to their art. This select organization contains some of the finest and most experienced actors and technicians at the university. Anyone who is allowed membership in Theta Alpha Phi has certainly won an honor well worth the respect of all who have even the slightest idea of the work demanded by the theatre.

Interlanguage Club Explores Foreign Life

This year the Illinois Wesleyan campus saw the worthwhile addition of an Interlanguage Club. Under the cooperative sponsorship of the entire language department, this loosely knit organization "fostered understanding of and developed interest in the history, literature, language, and customs of those areas in which Greek, French, German, and Spanish have been or are being spoken." The governing body, consisting of one representative from each language group, composed a constitution and planned the monthly meetings in which programs of a particular country were presented by the different language groups. A co-operative teaching program with the physical education department often made foreign dance demonstrations possible in these combined meetings. These stimulating monthly meetings coupled with a club trip to Chicago and projects, including foreign dinners and foreign film presentations, made this newly developed organization a successful opportunity for "freedom and variety of expression" among language club members.

Four vivacious can-can dancers "imported directly from the heart of Paris" perform before the members of the Interlanguage Club.

Orchesis-Creative Dance Group

Orchesis, the modern dance club, meets weekly, and is open to both men and women who are interested and qualified in modern dance. Formed in 1961, it now takes an active part in campus activities. Mrs. Jack Boeh, new physical education instructor on campus, served as the organization's sponsor and guided its activities for the year. In December, Orchesis members co-operated with members of the speech department in presenting the Christmas chapel program. Here members had the opportunity to express religious feeling through the medium of dance, depicting the idea of gift-giving as being representative of the materialism prevalent in the modern-day celebration of Christmas. The group developed the meaning of the first Christmas gifts given, symbolic of man's worship of God, and his compassion for his fellow man. In the spring the annual concert was presented in which the members demonstrated their application of the skills which they had striven to develop during the year. Various members showed examples of the different forms of communication and expression which can be accomplished through modern dance. This highlight of the year's events rewarded the hours of hard work the members put into their presentation. Concluding the year's program, members participated in the Fine Arts Festival held in May.

Peggy White and Sonia Benson express emotions through creative dance.

Terrapin Club

During a water show you may see a floating pattern such as this.

Terrapin Club, an organization for coeds who enjoy aquatic art, is centered around planning and preparing the annual water show which is presented each March. Terrapin activities begin in September with tryouts for membership. At that time Miss June Schultz, the club's sponsor and advisor, and the officers select new members on the basis of their swimming ability. Meetings are held weekly to complete business matters and practice the intricate formations. As the second semester begins and the show draws near, numbers are planned and set up. First themes and appropriate music are chosen. The members then swim for many hours to synchronize the water ballet with the music and to perfect their formations. Jan Drechsler, president, and Diana Hulse, vice-president, led the club's activities this past year. All of the members' efforts were well rewarded in the graceful performance the Terrapins presented.

The Terrapin members practice a ballet leg which is one of the most difficult of all water stunts to execute.

Gamma Upsilon Publications Honorary

Illinois Alpha Chapter of Gamma Upsilon was founded at Wesleyan by Dr. W. E. Schultz in 1935. It is an honorary student publications fraternity which rewards those students achieving certain standards of attainment on the staffs of the Argus, Wesleyana, or Black Book. This achievement usually includes at least two semesters of active participation and enthusiasm for journalistic endeavors. In 1963 the chapter decided to continue as a local society when the national organization was disbanded. Initiations are held once a semester. In February, seven new members were inducted. Each year at the Honors Day Convocation, Gamma Upsilon presents three awards in the areas of outstanding writing ability, general contribution, and managerial capacity. Gamma Upsilon promotes higher literary standards; because of this, the university receives a higher caliber of material in its publications. This year as a special project, members undertook the sale of a pamphlet containing general information on the football team. Membership in Gamma Upsilon has become an honor for which all students in the literary field strive.

Black Book

Material began coming in early this year to Black Book editor Dale Whitney, and advisor Mr. Joseph Meyers of the English Department. Although at the beginning of the year the Black Book had no office where the staff and contributors could gather resources, they later were given a room in the building which houses the coffeehouse. After an "office warming" party in late March, this new office was ready to become headquarters for staff members.

Wesleyan's literary magazine gathers stories, poetry, and art from the most talented students available. Most of the creative writing came from Mr. Meyers' advanced writing classes, although contributors are by no means limited to English majors or students. Bi-monthly coffee hours to which interested students were invited to come and read their latest efforts proved worthwhile both for the students and the Black Book staff. Fred Brian's art classes were again the major source of art work, which is selected for the magazine according to its excellence and appropriateness.

Informal meetings provided a workshop for contributors.

Mr. Joseph Meyers assists students in improving their efforts.

Wesleyana

A yearbook plays a vital part in college life, during undergraduate days and in years to come. Much technical work is involved, and many long, frustrating hours are spent in producing a book which is meaningful to the majority of students. In the spring editors and assistant editors for the coming year are chosen; a tentative budget is set up; contracts are made with printers, engravers, and cover firms; staff members are recruited; and spring events are photographed. The layout is planned during the summer, and arrangements are made for the cover. Upon returning to school in the fall, students are scheduled for class pictures. Later, group pictures are taken, copy is assigned, and campus activities are photographed. Throughout the winter pictures are taken; prints are selected, cropped, and sent to the engraver; copy is edited, proofread, and sent with the engraving proofs to the printer; and printing proofs are handed back and checked for errors. Final work is not completed until late in March and the yearbook is received by the students in May.

All these duties are work, but they are also fun in that staff members come in contact with others with whom they learn to work and co-operate. A good college yearbook can capture the spirit of a school and renew fond memories of undergraduate days.

The Argus: News of the Week

That light burning well past midnight in the basement of Holmes Hall means that the Argus will be out by breakfast on Friday. With the help of printer Bernie Gummerman, coffee-saturated students spend their free time making sure that the campus is informed of all the university's activities.

Over the weekend and early in the week Argus reporters scatter around campus ferreting out the news. At the risk of being told "No" or being locked out of a secret meeting, they tend to come through with the news of the week. Whether it's a coffeehouse or a civil rights statement, the student body usually learns about it first in the Argus.

In addition to the regular news coverage, the Argus serves as a sounding board for campus comments. Editorials reflect the attitudes of the editorial staff on current issues while the "Letters to the Editor" column reflects the pulse of campus opinion. Every other week Senate President Dick Muirhead explains the plans and programs of the student government. Last year's editor, Bob Berg, wrote a column this year from Stockholm, Sweden, where he was studying as a graduate student.

So as the year ends and another volume of the Argus is bound, so too is another year of Wesleyan history preserved.

IFC - Panhel

The Interfraternity Council's purpose is to promote the Greek system and to provide a forum for discussion of common fraternity problems. This year Larry Kramer, Jim Bruce, and Mike Coates spent several days at the national Interfraternity Council's convention in Washington, D.C., learning ways to promote and improve Wesleyan's IFC. The IFC controls the men's rush program and co-sponsors Greek Week with Panhellenic Council. The Greek Week program is dedicated to the promotion of growth of better understanding and relations among the Greeks.

The Maple Grove Nursing Home has been the main center of activity for the Panhellenic Council this year. Every Sunday afternoon two members from each sorority visited the patients and entertained them. The new fall pledge classes hiked out to Miller Park for a picnic sponsored by the Panhellenic Council. A wiener roast, conversation, and fun were among the festivities. The Council co-sponsored the Best-Dressed Girl Contest.

Indee Men

The purpose of the Independent Men's Association is to guide the unaffiliated students in participation in campus activities. In doing this it provides opportunities for participation in intramural activities, sponsors social events open to all students, and fosters all-school spirit. Wesleyan's chapter was founded on this campus and is affiliated with the National Independent Student's Association. Through its various activities the Indee Men provide cultural, social, and recreational opportunities for non-Greeks.

This year the organization's activities were varied. In the winter they sponsored a Sadie Hawkins dance complete with a Sadie Hawkins queen. They also continued their used book sale at the beginning of each semester and the end of the year. In this way students saved money on their purchase of text books. The HITCHHIKER also provided a valuable service as students matched rides with riders for transportation home during vacations.

IWU Big Green '65 CCI Champs

8 wins, 0 losses—this was the goal of Titans throughout the season and for many, ever since the preceding year's 7-1-1 record and championship crown. The team, with 22 returning lettermen, started the season as one of the largest to play for IWU, and developed into a well-rounded defensive and offensive power, strong in rushing as well as passing.

The passing department proved to be the biggest asset as Steve Laub, a CCI all-star choice, threw from behind a tough line, bolstered by other CCI all-star picks, center Dick Healy and tackle Larry Bross. He completed 80 out of 148 passes for 1376 yards, most of them to three of the best pass receivers in the conference. The three, Denny Matthews, Bruce Daydif, and CCI all-star halfback Mike Neal, created quite a problem for the opposing defensive backs, as each could be equally dangerous. Neal, fastest man on the squad, proved to be a favorite on the long pass pattern and hauled in 21 passes covering 519 yards, accounting for 9 of Laub's 19 touchdown passes.

Wesleyan's two leading rushers, Jim Carkhuff and Norm Erickson were the valuable men enabling the offense to move successfully on the ground as well as by air. Together, the two gained 924 yards of the team's total 1301 yards rushing. Carkhuff, who also caught 12 passes for 202 yards, moved the ball a total of 769 yards for the Big Green.

Just as important to the successful season as the offense was the defensive team led by the co-captain, Jim Kreitz. As CCI Conference selections, Jay Hilton, Al Mota, noted for his ability to break up pass plays, and Kreitz were big factors in holding the opposition to such little yardage. Bill Zora and Don Kreitz, pass defense experts, each intercepted 5 passes, causing problems for quarterbacks.

EVASIVE STEVE LAUB completed nineteen touchdown passes in the 8-0 winning season.

Al Mota pulls down another victim.

Let him off, Mike!

Team Efforts

The Titans started the season off by easily defeating the rival ISU team, revenging the previous season's only loss. The only close game during the season came with Carroll when an intercepted pass and a last-second long pass play led to two Pioneer touchdowns. Fortunately the Titan running game, led by frequent drives, was quite effective and thus enabled them to outscore the Pioneers 21-18.

The victory over the Big Blue, who were easily defeated in the final game, meant the completion of a perfect season for the Titans. Coached by Don Larson, chosen Coach of the Year in NAIA district 20 for his second consecutive year, the team not only conquered the conference crown, but finished with the outstanding ranking of seventh in NAIA standings.

All-Americans, J. Kreitz, NAIA defensive team and A. Mota, Associat Press' second defensive team, along with B. Olafson, made up a big part the Big Green's defense.

Sorry, Fellows. You're too late!

Assistant Coach Keck congratulates Mike Neal on a well-executed play.

Basketball

The outstanding Titan basketball season this year advanced to the quarter-finals of the National Association of Inter-Collegiate Athletics championship tournament at Kansas City. This was the finest NAIA placing in IWU basketball history, and came after the team captured victories from Dickinson State and highly ranked Midwestern Texas in their first two games of the tourney.

In order to go to this national tourney, the Titans earlier won the CCI conference championship, and the NAIA District 20 championship crown by defeating Illinois College and defending champion, Lewis College.

The Titans besides their 10-2 conference record gained some other outstanding victories. On the Eastern trip during semester break, the Titans defeated Iona, Union of Tennessee and Quincy. The Titans also defeated neighboring ISU twice, with scores of 90-71 and 91-69.

Ken Lock, elected most valuable player, led the team in rebounds for the second year, and in scoring followed closely behind Jamie Shouba who was the Titan's leading scorer for the past two years. Both were named to the CCI and District 20 NAIA all-star teams. Lock and Shouba, together with quick-handed guards Dale LaGow and Steve Laub, and forward Jim Gresham made the Titan Five a well-rounded group noted for fast breaking, run and shoot offense and effective defense.

Waiting for the inevitable, another Titan basket, are Steve Laub and Jamie Shouba along with two of the Redbirds.

It's up and easy as center Ken Lock (42) is about to rack-up two more points toward the Titan cause in a contest against Carthage College.

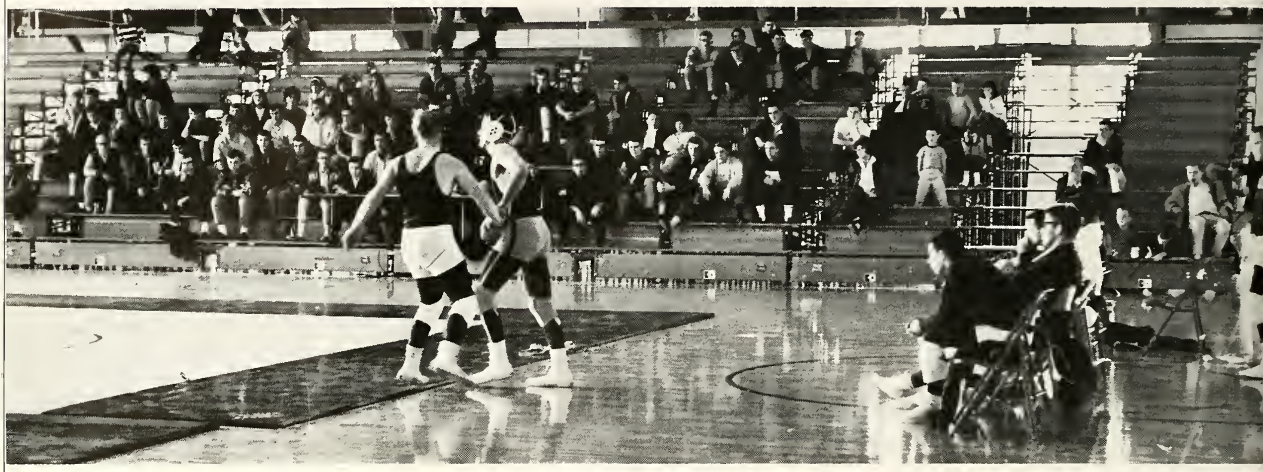
Wrestling--Groaning Grapplers



It's BACK TO the mat for more wrestling action as Titan Bob Giek (wearing head gear) and his opponent prepare to resume action.

A combination of injuries and ineligibility problems plagued the Titans as they hosted the CCI Conference Wrestling meet for the first time. With only five healthy wrestlers in training for the meet, Wesleyan could capture only two third-place finishes and consequently, finished a disappointing last in the field of six teams. Dennis Grottola, in the 137 lb. division and Jeff Beaumont at 190 lbs. both won decisions for third places in the CCI meet.

The season started with a squad of nineteen men which quickly dwindled to nine. This meant Coach Keck was able to fill only nine of the ten weight classes and was forced to forfeit the heavyweight class. The most unfortunate example of this predicament occurred in a dual meet with Chanute Air Force Base. The Titan grapplers had built up a 21-16 lead but had to settle for a 21-21 tie due to the forfeiture of five points in the final heavyweight match.

Team members who lettered included Craig Beaty, 123 lb. senior; John Nester, 152 lb. sophomore; Dennis Grottola, a 145 lb. sophomore who pinned one opponent in twelve seconds; and Jeff Beaumont, 191 lb. freshman who pinned three of his four opponents. Also, the return of freshman Larry Cobden plus the loss of only Craig Beaty and John Hoffman by graduation should encourage Titan wrestling fans to look forward to next year.

JOHN NESTER (top) gets in a little practice with team mate Jeff Beaumont before a scheduled CCI meet.

A "CRADLE" IN this case, as demonstrated by Titan grappler Dennis Grottola, is one method of trying to pin your opponent.

"Then I'm going to do this to him," says Craig Beaty.

Beaumont and Nester practice one of the many holds needed for proficiency in wrestling.

Swimming

Marty Spaulding completed a season of brilliant performance by placing fifth in the three-meter diving competition of the NAIA Swimming and Diving Championships at Conway, Arkansas. Earlier that week he captured a seventh place finish nationally in the one-meter event. Spaulding also won his third consecutive diving title in the CCI swimming at North Park, set a new record in diving at the Knox Relays, and teamed with fellow diver Bob Anderson to break another diving record at the Rockford Relays.

The Titan tankers managed a fourth place team finish in the CCI meet which saw sophomore Bob Anderson place fourth in diving behind winner Spaulding, Bob Bicket captured fifth in the 50 yd. freestyle and 200 yd. backstroke, and freshman Dick Jenkins won sixth place in the 50 yd. freestyle. The 400 yd. relay team of Jim Nicoloff, Spaulding, Bicket and Jenkins placed fourth. Earlier in the season, this same team won the 500 yd. freestyle relay at the Rockford Relays in the record meet time of 4:59.3 and set a school record the same day in the 400 yd. relay with a time of 3:40.2, eclipsing the old mark by 6.9 seconds. Nicoloff broke another school record this year in the 100 yd. butterfly with a time of 1:04.7.

Rich Jenkins, Rob Bicket and Jim Nicoloff were the main stays of the Titan relay team.

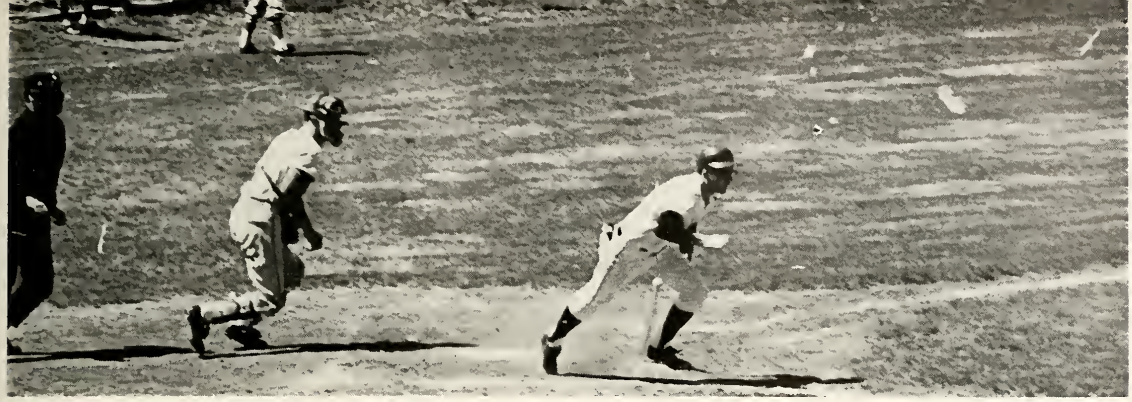
IWU Batmen

The Titans' air-tight infield goes into action.

The Titan hopes of winning the "triple crown", the CCI Championships in football, basketball, and baseball, during the 1964-65 sports year were almost realized. The showdown came in the final two conference baseball games at Augustana. The Titans needed a sweep of the double-header, but Augie had other plans in the opener and slugged out an 11 to 6 victory over the Big Green. Wesleyan took the second game 7 to 3 behind the pitching of Bob Jensen to finish in second place in the CCI with a 9-3 record.

The season began early in April as the squad, including eleven returning lettermen, headed south for its annual spring baseball excursion. The team returned north after completing an eight game schedule which included wins over Mississippi State and Delta State. Wesleyan stayed in the thick of the CCI race until the bitter end at Augustana, suffering only two heartbreaking one-run defeats at the hands of North Central and Carroll.

Dale LaGow, who will captain this year's team, and Mike Neal led the Titan hitting attack with batting averages of .316 and .310 respectively. The pitching staff was anchored by Tom Burmeister, with four wins and one defeat, and Larry Eichler, with three wins against one loss. Having lost only Tom Steward and Jim Hedrick through graduation, Coach Jack Horenberger's Titans can once again set their sights on that elusive CCI Baseball Championship.



Larry Eichler leads off with a hit.

Time out for minor adjustments.

L. Eichler, IWU pitcher, came up with three wins and one loss in conference action.

Titan Trackmen

A new CCI record in the high jump event along with top conference finishes by two freshmen proved to be the highlights of the IWU '65 track season. Jamie Shouba, who scored consistently at all of last spring's track meets not only won the conference high jump event for the second year, but set a new record of 6'2.75". Captain Bob Crites placed second in the high jump event and Shouba and Crites also placed second and fourth in the 120 yard high hurdles.

Freshman distance runners, Durrie Monsma and Curt Johnson placed third in the two-mile run and fifth in the mile run respectively. Two other Titans scored the remaining points at the conference meet in which the Big Green placed fifth. Ron Vyverberg, two time conference champion, won a silver medal in the broad jump and Ed Williams placed fifth in the javelin throw with a throw of 154 feet.

During the season other Titan thinclads were as follows: Roger Traver, two-mile run; Mike Coates, intermediate hurdles; Dave Long, half-mile run; 440-yard dash men, Tom McWhinnie, John Nester, and Larry Havercamp; and sprint men, Mike Pulliam and Ken Schwarz. Since none of last year's eight lettermen were lost by graduation and with freshman prospects filling weak events, the team, led by co-captains Ron Vyverberg and Mike Coates, should see an improvement over last season.

STEVE RILEY SHOWS the driving form which earned him medalist honors at the CCI conference meet.

A GOOD FOLLOW-THROUGH is important to Jack Feliksiak's golf score.

COACH DON LARSON expected Steve Riley, Joe Anderson, and Byron Tucci to return this spring to golf for IWU.

Golfers Swing Out

Steve Riley highlighted an otherwise average Wesleyan golf season by capturing medalist honors at the 1965 CCI Golf meet at Moline. Riley fired a 148 for 36 holes, 3 strokes better than defending medalist Dick Lee of Augustana, who was playing on his home course. The victory was particularly rewarding for the "Reliable Riley," since he had finished third in the conference as a freshman and second as a sophomore. The Titan team of Riley, Byron Tucci, Dave Norris, and Jack Feliksiak combined for a four-man total of 661 strokes, good enough for fifth place among a field of seven CCI teams.

On the regular season the linksmen lost two dual meets, finished second in three triangular meets, and captured one second, one third, and two fourth places in four quadrangular matches. This record was achieved in competition with such golfing powers as Bradley, Iowa, and Illinois State. With three returning lettermen, Coach Don Larson and his team are in a good position to improve on last year's record.

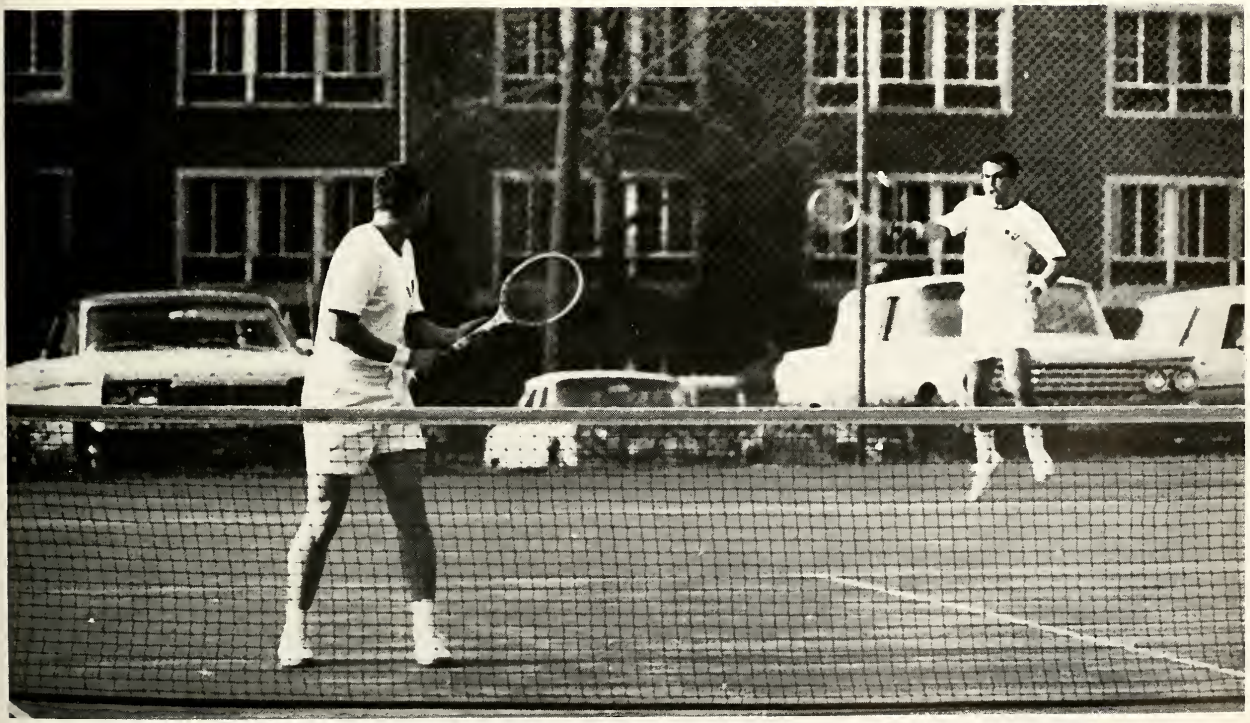
Jon Friedman hustles to return a smash.

Racquet men

With every member of the tennis team scoring at least one point in the conference meet last spring, the Titans tied Millikin for second place behind Augustana. IWU's fine team effort culminated a season which began slowly but improved considerably in the final half of the scheduled meets.

After losing seven of their first matches, the Titan tennis team came back strong by defeating six out of their last seven opponents. The Big Green hard courtmen won each of their last five contests easily with no team getting more than three of the nine available points as in the 6-3 win over Millikin.

At the conference meet at Augustana, Dennis Redding and Ken Epple brought in most of the points by each collecting two points for their performances in singles play and then joining together in doubles action against a fine Augustana team and finally defeating them in an exciting battle (13-11) after splitting the first two matches (4-6) and (6-2). Dave Fortuna and the doubles team of Jon Kinst and Jon Friedman each added a point to Wesleyan's final nine-point score. Two other tennis men, not participating in the conference meet, Bill Supe and Terry Ridenour, were valuable to last year's team throughout their fourteen meets.



D. Fortuna and J. Friedman, one of IWU's doubles teams, demonstrate their team work ability.

THE FIJI FIVE find that IM basketball action can get congested at times.

Men's Intramurals

Men's Intramurals is an activity at Illinois Wesleyan which helps break up the week of study, relieve tension, and give one not participating in a particular athletic event a chance to compete with others of his ability. Each year senior physical education majors are selected to take charge of the IM program. Headed this past year by Dave Smith and Bob Wertz, Wesleyan's varied program consisted of a dozen sports which were scheduled throughout the academic year.

Last year, following wins in both pledge and active basketball and in swimming, Phi Gamma Delta fraternity won the IM Sports Race. This year, during the fall and winter IM athletic events, Tau Kappa Epsilon and Sigma Chi tied for first place in golf, Sigma Chi won ping pong, and Phi Gamma Delta won both pledge basketball and swimming.

Following the basketball season, a representative group of the various teams participated at Lincoln College in a tournament of the area colleges of Eureka, Carthage, MacMurray, North Park and Greenville. Illinois Wesleyan, after a full day of hard playing, lost in the championship game to a tough team from Bradley.

Women's Recreation Association

The Women's Recreation Association, formerly known as the Women's Sports Association, is a non-competitive organization intended to include a large percentage of women in sports activities. The officers this year were Sandy Bahan, president; Kathy Shouse, vice-president; Betty Biehl, secretary; Sheila Butzer, treasurer; and Ann Pearson, chairman of extramural activities. Besides participating in sports days with other colleges and universities, it sponsors a Co-Rec Night every month, at which time different activities are enjoyed by both men and women. Early in the year the organization revised its constitution opening membership to all women, which was one of the measures designed to better fit the recreational needs of the students. Basketball, bowling, and tennis were the activities planned for the first semester. Tennis, volleyball, archery, and badminton were on the agenda for the second semester.

Every sorority house and dorm was urged to enter a team in the intramural tournaments held throughout the year, for recreation gives the participants an opportunity to "let off steam", inducing relaxation and more concentrated study. Awards are not given to the winning teams; the enjoyment of the recreation is stressed rather than the competitive aspect. The physical education department feels that recreational activities are important and that "in order to have sound minds, students must have sound bodies."

W Club

The "W" Club was founded in 1920 as an organization honoring those varsity athletes who have won their letters for participation in intercollegiate competition, or for managing teams. The club stresses the ideals of good sportsmanship both on and off the playing field. Co-operation in a team effort is also of vital importance. This training may be applied not only to the field of athletics, but also to the field of academics and on into later life.

The main function of the club is the year-end banquet at which the members and the coaches salute those among them that have shown superior athletic ability throughout the past year. Awards are given at that time for the most valuable players and the most improved players in various areas of sports. The graduating seniors look back with the pride of achievement in wearing the "W" of Illinois Wesleyan.

W Club's most active member is junior Steve Laub who has earned letters in baseball, basketball and football.

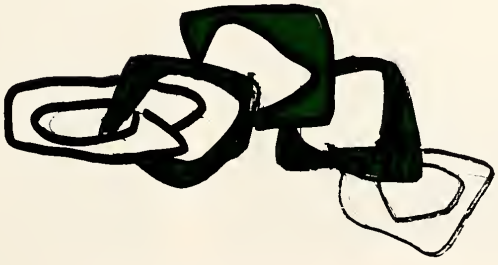
Cheerleading Squad

A cheerleader's activities include participation in practices, games, and special events. The cheerleading calendar of events was launched with the selection of this year's squad, which numbers ten. The first home football game at which the new cheerleaders worked together as a squad was the Homecoming game. They took part in the pep rally, the parade, and of course, the game. Next came the pep rallies and games on MYF Day and Dad's Day. The fathers of IWU students were entertained at the annual Dad's Day barbecue by the same cheers which were used at the afternoon game. A new feature this year was that of taping cheers for WJBC, the Bloomington radio station.

Fall was quickly followed by winter and all the thrills of the basketball season. The cheerleaders led the spectators in support of the team and added greatly to the color and excitement of the games. At the concluding event of the year, the annual Athletic Banquet, honors and awards were presented.

Civing Groups



Dorm Life

Throughout the years of his college career, a student needs a home away from home, and to this end Wesleyan provides fourteen dormitories—eight for men and six for women. Small ones such as Munsell, Wallis and Dickinson are preferred by many students because of their homey atmospheres. It seems, however, that small dormitories on Wesleyan's campus face an inevitable doom, what with next year's slated completion of the new dorms.

This year the campus had an honor dorm for the first time, as the girls living in DeMotte Lodge followed all university regulations without the supervision of a housemother.

Each dorm on the campus has its own officers and floor counselors as well as Student Senate representatives, thus providing students the opportunity to develop and practice qualities of leadership. Representatives from each dorm also serve on Interdorm Council which discusses general problems and ideas. For Homecoming, each residence hall enters the "house dec" competition, bringing loyal workers together until all hours of the morning. The residence halls sponsor formals each semester as well as all sorts of spontaneously informal events including tree trimmings, bridge games, and long sessions of nightly group study.

Decorating the tree is part of the fun of the Christmas holidays.

"Oh, but it was a hard night."

Adams Hall

Adams Hall, in its first year as a small women's residence, housed twenty sophomore and junior women. All of the women felt very comfortable in the friendly, homey atmosphere. A large well-used fireplace, an often-played piano in the front room, an open kitchen, and most of all—the sight of "Mother" sitting in her favorite chair, knitting up a mohair-storm, all helped to convey the "second homeness" of Adams Hall.

All of the activities of the year were informal gatherings in the front room, exchanges with their neighbors Kemp and Munsell, and a planned informal. As a small residence hall, the women worked together as a family and as a team. The results of combined efforts and backing helped the Adams basketball team win the intramural tournament.

Mother Robertson was the most important influence in uniting the twenty women into a family. Her doors were always open for warm and friendly advice.

Blackstock

After being used as a men's residence for two years, Blackstock Hall was again occupied by women this year. The dorm has a capacity of twenty-two upperclassmen, with one to six girls in each room. Its size gives it a "homey" atmosphere.

An unusual feature of Blackstock life, that compared with other dorms, was bi-monthly Sunday night dinners. In addition the tree-trimming and a house decorating party during the Christmas holidays, was a festive occasion with invited friends joining the fun. Holiday activities included a Christmas party and also a dance. As a theme for the dance the Blackstock girls selected "Champagne and Velvet." On chilly winter evenings the fireplace was often the focal point of Blackstock activity.

Blackstock residents joined in campus activities by participating in Homecoming, joining Gulick to construct house decorations, the Sadie Hawkins Dance, and the Best-Dressed Girl on Campus contest.

DeMotte Lodge

DeMotte Lodge, a familiar name on campus for many years, took on a new look this year. Now located at 1409 N. Park, DeMotte was home to twelve upperclass women. For the first time at Wesleyan, a women's dorm did not have a housemother, and consequently was known as the "honor" dorm.

University regulations concerning hours, signing out, and overnights were followed as in other dorms. Because of the unique nature of the dorm, special rules were made about matters such as locking up at night, leaving messages, cooking in the dorm, and general tidiness. All twelve of the girls, selected upon the recommendation of former housemothers to Dean Meierhofer, held some position of responsibility on its house council, which met twice a month.

DeMotte was socially and scholastically one of the most active dorms on campus. Together with Pfeiffer they constructed the winning house decs at Homecoming. Social events were held jointly with Adams Hall, and residents of Thrall and Schultz Halls were once invited over for an evening of home-made cookies, records, and pop corn. Several fraternities took the dorm under their wing and lent help with such things as uncooperative Christmas trees, balky screen doors, and broken light fixtures. That a full social life was not the primary concern of DeMotte is evidenced by the fact that it had the highest scholastic average for women's dorms. In addition, most of the residents were members of honorary organizations such as Alpha Tau Delta, Kappa Delta Pi, Gamma Upsilon, and Assemblage.

Ferguson Hall

Life in Ferguson has had its usual ups and downs during the year. Amidst the excitements of dates, pinnings, and serenades, the 170 residents also managed to maintain a high academic standing. With the friendly assistance of "Mom J.", Mrs. Lavonna Johnson, the girls not only survived epidemics of flu and measles, but rallied to midnight snacks and coffee during exams, vespers every Thursday evening and special holiday teas. The building of Munsell Hall next door gave rise to an influx of workmen that added excitement to the clanking radiators, occasionally stalled elevator, broken pay phone, over-loaded washer and warm friendships that make dorm life so rewarding.

Social events were not lacking on the "Fergie" calendar this year either. The fall informal, the "Deck Wreck" carried through successfully on a sea-side theme; efforts by officers and committees saw huge "house decs" erected for the Homecoming festivities; the "Sway Ride" informal in February featured the Fratiers, and the successful season was concluded with a spring formal.

Gulick Hall

Gulick girls number 152 and this year the dorm had the pleasure of accommodating a new boarder, a black cat named Inky, befriended by Mother Tull. As the girls look back on this year they are reminded of our two lovely formal dances: "Midnight Ice", the winter formal held in our own recreation room, and the spring dinner-dance at Holiday Inn, "A Taste of Honey." They will remember the excitement around Homecoming and the house dec which won second prize, the candlelight procession through the halls followed by the Christmas Party, and the Senior Party held at the end of the year, to honor the graduating seniors. There were also exciting dorm meetings, long hours spent studying, enjoyable times watching television, and those warm spring days spent sunbathing on the roof. Next year the girls will move to the new dorm, for Gulick Hall will become a men's residence hall.

"Somehow it's always my room."

Pfeiffer Hall

Pfeiffer Hall, one of Wesleyan's girls' dormitories, had a full capacity of girls this year. However, there was still plenty of room for study and individual get-togethers.

One informal and two formals marked their social calendar this year. The spring formal was a dinner-dance sponsored almost entirely by the dorm. Other social events were a welcome party for the new freshmen, a Halloween costume party, and a Christmas party. At Halloween and Christmas door decoration contests were held, and the halls took on a festive holiday look.

Pfeiffer girls along with the girls in Adams worked hard on house decorations for Homecoming this year. It was well worth the effort when the nine-foot Wesleyan surfer, in keeping with their Hawaiian theme, won first place in house decs. The project was a big one, but everyone joined in and had a lot of fun.

One new project which was put into practice was begun at examination time this year and proved to be very successful. For one hour each night coffee and cookies were served in the kitchen for those who desired them. It was a good study break besides providing a good way to stay awake.

Dickinson Hall

Repaired and redecorated after last year's fire, Dickinson Hall served its second year as a men's residence hall. The addition of new furniture helped to improve the appearance of the dormitory. The dubious advantage of a television set was also added this year.

The hall housed only eleven students the first semester, and eight during the second semester. Most of the students were freshmen, and the dormitory was under the guidance of Ron Annegers, a junior, who served as head resident.

In spite of the small number of students, there was a wide range of interests in the house, and the opportunity for exchanging ideas was increased by the closeness of the living situation. Many lasting friendships were made during the year. The somewhat crowded conditions were eased when three students moved out of the dorm at the end of the first semester, but the atmosphere was still close, and this provided for friction as well as harmony. Problems had a way of working themselves out, however, and living at Dickinson was refreshingly different from "big dorm" life.

Franklin Hall

Franklin Hall, home of 126 men, was the scene of varied activity during the 1965-66 school year. Franklinites started the year off big at Homecoming time by winning first place in the House Decoration contest. Their reconstruction of the Golden Gate Bridge represented long hours of planning and hard work and helped to spur the Titan football team on to victory.

Shortly, thereafter, Franklin men began to assume greater interest in their form of self-government. A new system of representation was initiated, and a new House Council elected with John Hewitt at the helm. The new president soon appointed a Constitutional Revision Committee who will place a new constitution on the spring election ballot.

Franklin Hall's first informal of the year was loaded with fun. In fact, it was such a smashing success that Social Chairman, Palmer Chapman, planned three more such parties for the second semester. The dorm formal was held at the Holiday Inn late in January. The delicious food and excellent music made for a fine evening.

Franklinites also held their annual Christmas party for underprivileged children. It was difficult to say whether the kids or the couples had the more fun as they sang Christmas carols, received gifts from Old Saint Nick himself, and enjoyed ice cream and cookies together.

Franklin Hall intramural teams also had a varied year. Keith Davis and George Saito went all the way to pull down the university doubles contest in ping-pong. The Freshman basketball team outshot the all-dorm team as they won four out of seven as compared to a 3-11 log with the help of the upper classmen. The bowling and softball teams hope to return the dorm to the victory trail in the spring.

Kemp Hall

On the western perimeter of the Wesleyan campus sits Kemp Hall like a great, gaunt toad. Within its walls thirty-six men pursue their ambitions: the astronomy majors peer with binoculars through the south windows at the heavenly bodies, the religious gather around the television as early as mid-afternoon in order to get a good seat for "The Midnight Meditation." Still others enjoy moments of respite from their studies in the handsome recreation room, whose antiqued-whitewash walls and stained-linoleum floors lend themselves smartly to the room's pre-urban renewal decor.

Why do they live here, these men of Kemp? There are many reasons. Those seeking the Spartan life find winter at Kemp fulfilling, and those whose tastes lean toward the aesthetic discover unparalleled beauty in the natural waterfalls that occasionally emanate from the ceilings, the paddock-like croaks of the water pipes in the evening, and Sunday afternoons sitting on the porch and watching the automobile accidents on Main Street. Others still find a home-away-from-home atmosphere in Kemp's fraternal activities, such as all-night pre-exam coffee parties. Frequently festivities arise spontaneously, as when a bed catches on fire, or when a roomer lets himself in for the Kemp Hall Water Torture by divulging the date of his birthday.

Although a member of the clan who lives here may reply satirically when asked about his life at Kemp, his true feelings are most often revealed by the fact that the majority of Kemp men, once they move in, stay here until they graduate. The inquirer should then only smile when a resident of Kemp says something like, "Kemp is more than just a dorm to me. . . . It's more like—like a slum."

Magill Hall

Welcoming their new head resident to the dorm proved to be the start of another successful year for the men of Magill. Mrs. Naomi Sweet ably guided the residents and dorm officers Lew Phinney, Stuart Beardsley, Jim Leathers, and Pete Washer as they met the challenges of the various school-year activities.

Dorm spirit melded quickly in the fall as a result of the work on the revolving Statue of Liberty for the Homecoming house decorations competition. First semester social activities included an informal, "The Mid-Term Squirm," and a formal, "A Whisper of Winter." The social highlight of the year was the spring formal "Stairway to the Stars," held at the Holiday Inn.

Several of the men of Magill distinguished themselves throughout the year as nocturnal bridge players, soda can collectors, or AAA Ambulance Service attendants and drivers. Individual academic excellence, achievement in the realm of the fine arts, and interest and participation in sports also commanded the attention of many of the residents.

To SLEEP or to study, that is the question.

At Munsell, Van Sauve conscientiously studies the rules for "Risk."

Munsell and Wallis

Soft-spoken Mother Kuhn has presided over the men of Munsell Hall's madcap activities this past year. The Munsell men enthusiastically compete in the all-night living room tournaments of "Risk," "Dogfight," and "Harnplatz," or participate in the bi-weekly convention of the Batman Club; or battle in the staircase water-gun wars that culminated in all-out warfare, complete with shaving cream and flying pillows. But with their eccentricities, it must be admitted that the men comprise a more closely-knit group than can be found in the larger dorms, and their camaraderie continues even under hardship—as during the Great Wesleyan Flu Epidemic of last winter, when Munsell was perhaps the hardest hit dorm on campus.

Wallis Hall, new this year at 1001 N. East Street, is one of the most sports-minded dorms on campus. There are not many planned activities, but the men of Wallis are seldom at a loss for something to do. They either join in an impromptu football game in the side yard, shoot baskets, or have a fast game of catch between classes. Mike Neff, the dorm's Athletic Chairman, planned the one organized social event of the year—a baseball trip to St. Louis. Wallis men like the lived-in, homey atmosphere of their dorm.

Park Hall

Park Hall was one of the smaller dormitories this year. Twelve students lived there during the first semester, and only nine during the second semester. Improvements over last year's facilities included new furniture and a washing machine. The television set which was installed this year was taken out at the request of the residents who felt that it would interfere with their study habits.

Although the group of students living at Park was composed mostly of underclassmen, a serious attitude prevailed. The house maintained an excellent grade-point average, and was the first residence on campus to pass the Human Rights Statement drawn up by the Human Relations Commission.

Park Hall has several men involved in student government this year, including Bob Field who was chairman of the Public Relations Commission.

There was much commotion when Al Mota, president of the dorm, was married. Other dorm officers were Bill Schell and Jim Galbreath, social chairman and secretary-treasurer respectively. The Senate representative for the house was Larry Farr, and the Interdorm representative was Larry Copes. Don Mollis was Head Resident.

Thrall Hall houses 13 men, the majority of whom are upper classmen, the rest of whom are pledged to one house or another. They have nightly wrestling matches before retiring, refer to their rooms affectionately as apartments, and seal the fragile walls with empty cans. They temporarily adopted a black cat, but enough superstitution was aroused that the cat had to go.

Many student leaders live in Thrall and some with artistic and literary talent. All of the men who live there, without a housemother to call on when shirts need ironing, seem to love it.

Greek Societies Foster the Well Rounded Student

The Greek system is and should be an integral part of campus life no matter where one goes to school. Greek life at Illinois Wesleyan is rather typical of that on other campuses, differing only in its local traditions and practices. Those affiliated with Greek letter societies value ideals of loyalty, friendship, respect for their fellow man, and attainment of physical, mental, and spiritual health. They enjoy attending college and participating in its activities, for they enjoy the social and intellectual atmosphere college offers.

Fraternities and sororities at Illinois Wesleyan participate in many activities together, such as house exchanges, serenades, special projects, Greek Variety Show and Greek Week. At these times members make an all-out effort to get to know each other. Exchanges may take the form of dances, baseball parties, desserts, dinners, or hootenannies. Serenades take place throughout the year on week-end nights after hours. Special projects often are open houses, fund-raising dinners, or parties to entertain orphans. Greek Week takes place in the spring, beginning with an interfraternity dinner and continuing with planned activities throughout the week. Greek Variety Show is one such activity, at which time fraternity and sorority members entertain with skits and musical numbers.

Greeks on every campus are leaders, for they learn the value of responsibility both inside their respective houses and on campus. They have the advantage of close ties with those whom they have chosen to live in close proximity, but also have the opportunity to expand from this starting point.

Nearly all the houses on our campus have special activities throughout the year. Most houses have one formal and one informal per semester. A number of these social functions are quite well-known: Sigma Chi Derby Day, Phi Gamma Delta Rose Formal, A O Pineapple Party, Acacia Nite on the Nile, Theta Chi Bowery Brawl, Alpha Gamma Delta Spring Formal, Sigma Chi Sweetheart Formal, Tau Kappa Epsilon Bowery Brawl, and Phi Gamma Delta Pig Dinner, to name just a few.

The two governing and co-ordinating organizations responsible for promoting Greek life are Panhellenic Council for sororities and Interfraternity Council for fraternities. These groups are made up of representatives from each of the Greek houses on campus, and at their meetings they discuss the problems of sorority and fraternity life. They work together in a joint effort in the spring in planning and executing Greek Week and Greek Variety Show. In addition, each council reviews their respective rush rules for the coming year, and revises and changes them to make for better systems of rushing which will be more acceptable to their situations.

Alpha Gamma Delta

Xi Chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta is one of 94 national chapters. The Alpha Gams have the distinction of having more chapters in Canada than any other fraternity in the country. They are looking forward to attending the National Convention this summer which will be held in Victoria, Canada.

Alpha Gamma Delta started the year off with an informal, "Alpha Goblins", put on by the pledges for Halloween. The mood became more dreamy when the girls attended their winter formal "Winter Wonderland." The highlight of the social year, however, was the Spring formal "Valdosta" with a Southern plantation theme to fit in beautifully with the style of the Chapter house.

The Alpha Gams also sponsor several philanthropic projects. Locally, the girls help with the fight against tuberculosis, by stuffing envelopes with stamps. Nationally, Alpha Gamma Delta helps brain-damaged children and Xi Chapter raised money for this project in the beginning of the school year by sponsoring a dinner with a combo afterwards.

The Alpha Gams also started sponsoring teas this year for the Alpha Gamma Delta alumnae in the area in order for every one to become better acquainted.

Alpha Omicron Pi

Beta Lambda Chapter of Alpha Omicron Pi, the youngest house on campus, was very happy to begin the year by winning the Sweepstakes trophy at the Homecoming dance.

The AOPi's sponsored three parties this year beginning with the annual AOPineapple party put on in the autumn by the pledge class. The girls also enjoyed thinking up original costumes for their "Pick-a-Pair" party in January. Everyone had a good time in the more formal atmosphere of the spring dinner-dance.

The Alpha Omicron Pi Convention was held in St. Louis this summer and Beta Lambda was one of the hostess' chapters. The girls who attended were all very excited to be presented with the J.W.H. Cup, which is the highest award that an AOPi Chapter may receive.

The AOPi's have also worked hard this year for their national philanthropic program, Frontier Nursing Social Service in Kentucky. The girls raised money for this project by making sandwiches and selling them to the fraternity houses. The girls also collected mittens at Christmas time to be sent to all the children in the area of the Frontier Nursing Social Service.

Kappa Delta

Omicron Chapter of Kappa Delta began the year by driving in the second place float for Homecoming. The girls kept up their enthusiasm by "A Walk on the Wild Side," their fall informal and chose the Christmas season to put on their annual dinner-dance, "Roses in the Snow." The social year came to an end with the "Beachcombers" party at Lake Bloomington.

Members from the 105 Kappa Delta Chapters met this summer in Chicago for their National Convention "Kappa Delta Album of Memories." At this convention five new KD Chapters hung their shields.

Aside from their campus activities the Kappa Deltas take time out to help their community. This year, in cooperation with the Sigma Chis, they put on a Christmas Orphan Party for the children of the Soldiers and Sailors Home, complete with games, carols, and Santa Claus passing out gifts. Nationally, the KDs support the Crippled Children's Hospital in Richmond, Virginia, through Christmas Seals.

Epsilon Chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma was founded on Illinois Wesleyan's campus in 1873. This summer members from 92 chapters throughout the nation will come together for a convention at Cape Cod.

The Kappas had a very exciting fall starting with an open house to celebrate their new home and Becky McLaughlin being chosen Homecoming Queen. The girls were busy attending the fall informal "Salute to KKG" and the winter formal "Winter Mist," both of which were held in the chapter house.

The Kappas also find time to participate in several philanthropic projects. Each of the pledges this year had a special daughter at the Soldiers and Sailors home whom she visited whenever possible. The entire Kappa house worked all year on a special project with the Acacians for the men serving in Viet Nam. KKG also joined the other sororities at Wesleyan in entertaining the residents at Maple Grove Nursing Home outside Bloomington.

Sigma Alpha Iota

Sigma Alpha Chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota is proud to be the only one of 140 SAI Chapters to have a house. However, this is not the only way that the SAI's are unique. Besides putting on two informals and a spring dinner-dance, they put on a Christmas Musicale, co-sponsored the Campus Carol, and co-sponsored an oratorio with Phi Mu Alpha and DO.

Sigma Alpha Iota chapters from all over the nation came together this summer in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Sigma Alpha's own Susan Herrs was the Illinois winner of the leadership award. All those in attendance were privileged to enjoy concerts by nationally known artists. A special event of the convention was a speech given by the director of the J. F. Kennedy Center for Performing Arts.

But the SAI's do not spend all their time with music. A great deal of effort is expended for philanthropic projects. Locally, they present programs at Heritage Manor and at Brokaw Hospital. Also, they usher for the Bloomington-Normal Symphony.

Eta Chapter of Sigma Kappa started off the school year right by receiving the City Panhellenic Scholarship Cup.

Socially, the SKs found themselves very busy, starting with the discothèque informal "Autumn À Go Go" in the early fall. The biggest dance of the year was the Christmas formal "Heather and Hearth" which began with a dinner party at the festively decorated house, followed by a dance at the Illinois House. All members thought the Spring Barbeque an exciting end to the social season.

Eta Chapter, founded on Wesleyan's campus on February 14, 1906, is one of 105 Sigma Kappa chapters located throughout the country. All Sigma Kappas are anxiously looking forward to their National Convention, which will be held this summer from June 25 to June 30 in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Along with other activities, the SKs actively support several philanthropic projects. On a national level Sigma Kappa helps support the Maine Sea Coast Mission and locally they put on monthly programs for Heritage Manor.

Acacia

In 1957 a small group of Illinois Wesleyan students banded together to form Alpha Kappa Alpha local fraternity. A few months later, this local chapter affiliated with Acacia, a well-known national fraternity. Acacia is a charter member of the National Interfraternity Conference and has been active in the national Greek system for many years.

Among the chapter traditions are co-sponsoring the Campus Carol with Sigma Alpha Iota professional music sorority, the Black and Gold Formal, and the Nite on the Nile week-end at which the traditional Sphinx makes its appearance. During the Homecoming festivities, the Acacians placed first in the Chariot Race, second in float competition, and second in the Campus Beast contest.

As a project for the year, the Acacians joined the Kappas in collecting donations from Bloomington-Normal merchants for use in Viet Nam. Throughout the year, the Acacians have been active in various inter-Greek and campus-wide affairs and have exerted leadership in some fields.

PHI GAMS COMPARE notes during an informal study break.

Phi Gamma Delta

Phi Gamma Delta National Fraternity was founded in 1848 at Jefferson College in Pennsylvania. Alpha Deuteron Chapter was chartered at Illinois Wesleyan in December, 1866, as the first social Greek-letter organization on the Wesleyan campus.

This year the Phi Gams celebrated the centennial of their local founding. Both undergraduates and alumni commemorated the organization of Alpha Deuteron Chapter at their annual Pig Dinner, which was held at the end of Greek Week.

The social life of the Phi Gams is very active. Their activities this year included the Fiji Rose Formal in January and a grass skirt party in the spring. In addition, the fraternity men participated in a community service project for the Red Cross and took part in a National Phi Gamma Delta Day, at which time all the chapters across the nation participated in similar activities. The Fijis are anxiously awaiting a new house on "fraternity row," to be completed in the spring of 1967.

Phi Mu Alpha

Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, a national professional music fraternity, was founded at the New England Conservatory of Music on October 6, 1898. Alpha Lambda Chapter, one of the few chapters which maintains a chapter house, was established at Wesleyan on June 7, 1928. Plans for the future include the construction of a new chapter house.

Chapter traditions include "American Musicale," two jazz band concerts, and various individual recitals throughout the year. The pledges perform in a public recital, marking the end of their pledgeship. Phi Mu presented a Baroque Collegium program. In addition to the fall informal, "Once Upon a Broomstick," the winter and Sweetheart formals provide pleasant breaks in the academic year.

Two faculty members in the Wesleyan School of Music are nationally recognized for the offices they hold in the fraternity. They are Dr. Carl Neumeyer, Second Vice-President, and Mr. Henry Charles, Province Governor.

The Phi Mu's demonstrate their musical ability by gathering homemade instruments for an impromptu jam session.

Sigma Chi

With the colors of blue and gold and the sweetheart rose as its symbols, Sigma Chi Fraternity is well-known on Wesleyan's campus. The first chapter of Sigma Chi was established at Miami University in Ohio in 1855. Wesleyan's chapter, Alpha Iota, was founded 28 years later, in 1883.

Among the social activities of the Sigs are the pledge pajama party in the fall, the spring formal, at which the Sweetheart of Sigma Chi is chosen, an orphan party at the Soldier's and Sailor's Home in conjunction with Kappa Delta Sorority, and Derby Day, which includes events during two days in the spring. The first exciting action takes place in the middle of campus on a Friday afternoon when all the sorority girls are turned loose to capture derby hats for points. The Sigs usually have a few tricks "up their sleeves" as well as "under their hats." On Saturday the girls compete in events such as the limbo, egg race, and fishing for golf balls in the mud. Again this year the Sigs won the Homecoming Sweepstakes and retired the keg.

Tau Kappa Epsilon

Tau Kappa Epsilon, the world's largest international social fraternity, was founded at Illinois Wesleyan in January, 1899. Boasting the largest undergraduate membership, Teke is strongly held together by the belief that the brothers belong to a "fraternity for life."

Alpha Chapter tries to maintain a careful balance of social life, athletics, and a rigorous academic program. Highlights of the Teke social schedule are the Bowery Brawl, the Playboy Party, and the crowning of their Sweetheart at the annual Sweetheart Formal. Athletics are well covered by Alpha with participation in various intramural events, a pledge-active football game, and the state and national Teke basketball tournaments.

As citizens of the university and community, Tekes are found active in all areas of campus affairs and sponsor a community service project each year.

Anticipation runs high to move into the new colonial chapter house on Franklin Avenue which is now nearing completion.

After the annual football game with rival ISU, the TKE's held an open house for the entire campus.

Theta Chi

THETA CHI GUITARISTS practice the accompaniment for the folk singing popular during rush parties and exchanges.

Sixty-four men consider Theta Chi a vitally important part of their lives at Illinois Wesleyan. Theta Chi Fraternity was founded on April 10, 1856, and since then has grown into one of the largest social fraternities with over 140 chapters throughout the United States and Canada. Founded on IWU's campus in 1919, it has established a tradition of responsibility and excellence. It is active on campus and in student government, with members serving as class officers, student senators, and activity leaders.

Theta Chi's scholastic achievements were recognized at the fall convocation when they won trophies for maintaining the highest men's grade point average. The Batman Party, Playboy Party, Bowery Brawl, and other exchanges and parties were highlights this year, with the Dream Girl Formal foremost.

A portion of the Theta Chi Creed well summarizes their multi-purpose function—"Theta Chi builds men." They also have an obligation to Wesleyan: "Alma Mater first, Theta Chi for Alma Mater."

Dr. Marie J. Robinson.

Dedication

Dr. Marie J. Robinson, Chairman of the Department of Speech, has been a respected and admired part of the University since her arrival at Illinois Wesleyan in 1950. She has not only developed Speech into the fine department that it is, but has distinguished herself repeatedly by handling positions of honor and leadership both on campus and in state and national organizations. She embodies the integrity and conscientiousness that makes a teacher not only an educator, but a valuable and lasting influence upon those who know her. To Dr. Robinson we dedicate the 1966 Wesleyana with pride and gratitude.

Faculty Conducts Research in All Fields

Dr. Dorothea Franzen is doing research at Michigan.

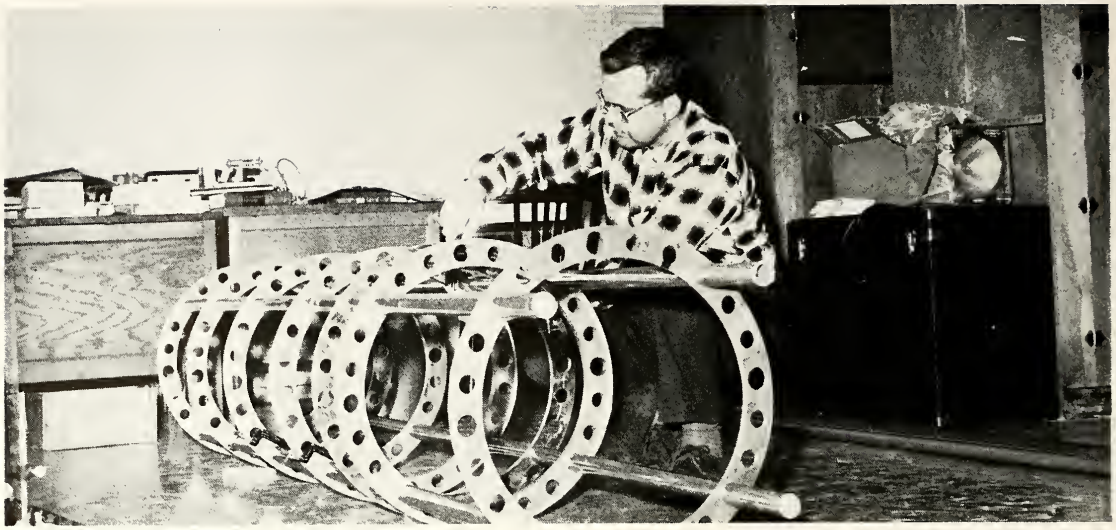
Many Illinois Wesleyan faculty members have conducted various research projects in their respective fields during this past year. Research has not been restricted to the natural sciences. On our campus professors in every department have been doing research on their own this year.

Dr. Dorothea Franzen of the biology department has been continuing her study of North American land snails at the University of Michigan this year.

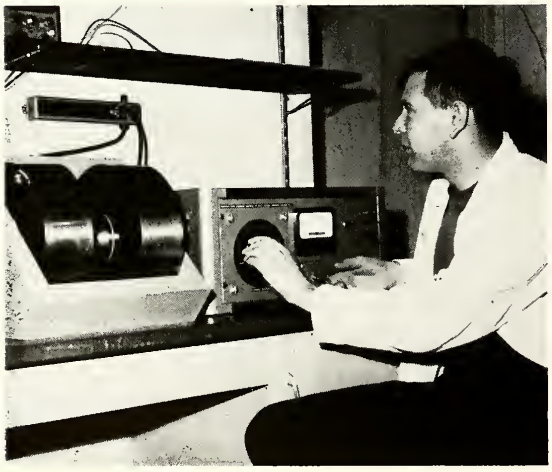
Dr. Wayne Wantland has been continuing his study of two types of oral protozoa. Included was a nine-year survey of one thousand dental patients to determine the number carrying these oral protozoa. The purpose of the survey was to determine if the presence of these protozoa has anything to do with tooth decay or pyorrhea, a disease of the gums. Thus far Dr. Wantland has concluded that one hundred percent of the patients having pyorrhea were found to also have the second type of oral protozoa. Dr. Wantland has completed his survey and is now in the process of compiling and classifying data. The United States Public Health Service supported his study and survey.

These "sacrificial altars" are used by students of astronomy.

X-ray Diffraction is demonstrated by Dr. Murray.



Mr. Wilson, M.A., builds much of the physics apparatus.



Gregg Schiffbauer tests some of the physics equipment.

Dr. Joseph C. Collins of the Chemistry Department is experimenting with glucose in order to make two types of sugars, allose and ribos, from the glucose. Allose, a very rare sugar, is found in certain cancer cells. Allose was first synthesized in 1952, but the synthesis is not economical or practical in other ways. Dr. Collins' goal is to make these sugars more available and less expensive so they can be used to make other compounds and be used in further experimentation. He plans to publish his results so that industry can use his findings to make and sell these compounds from allose. Dave Gearhart, one of Dr. Collins' students, is making xylose, another sugar, from glucose. Also this year a new use for a certain oxidizing agent for synthetic purposes was found by the Chemistry Department at Wesleyan.

Chemistry Students were helped at Argonne by Dr. Bruce Murray.

Liberal, Fine Arts Research

The Psychology Department, under the direction of Dr. Thomas Stachnik, has been occupied this past year with research concerned with conditioned aggressive behavior. By stimulating the brain of a normally timid rat, the rat can be conditioned to aggress against a monkey four or five times its size. This is an attempt to determine whether or not aggressive behavior is learned in the same way that other types of behavior are learned.

Dr. Max Pape, Dr. Paul Miller, and Mrs. Emily Dale of the Department of Sociology are concerned with the research topic of "The Total Etiological Agents of Poverty." They plan to initiate and administer a research program that would determine the core of the causes of poverty. This project is not being conducted on an individual basis, as are most of the other projects at Wesleyan. The whole Department of Sociology is working on this poverty program.

In the Art Department, Mr. Rupert Kilgore has had prints accepted at several exhibition shows this year. He won a purchase prize at the Carver Community Exhibition, with an entry entitled "Dawn Comet." He also entered the Great Plains Art Show in Nebraska, open to college teachers in the plains states. Mr. Kilgore also entered two prints in the Mid-States Exhibition, a regional art show which was held in Evansville, Indiana, and two prints in the Hoosier Salon in Indianapolis, Indiana.

Mr. Barton McNeil was occupied this year with experiments with lithography. He entered lithographs in the Chicago Art Institute Drawing and Print Show, in the Decatur Art Center Exhibition, and in the Michiana Exhibition. Mr. McNeil exhibited paintings in the Illinois State Museum Invitational Exhibition and in the Illinois State Fair Exhibition.

These rats are being used to study aggressive behavior.

From President Bertholf's desk come the decisions which will lead to a better, smoother running, and more progressive university.

Authority, Leader, and Traveler

President Bertholf and his family ride in the homecoming parade.

Again this year President Lloyd Bertholf traveled to many parts of our country to give speeches concerning the program of learning at Illinois Wesleyan, the facilities being used, and those needed to administer the educational program. Most of these speeches are made to alumni groups and donors who are interested in the progress of Illinois Wesleyan University. President Bertholf also gives a large portion of his time to replacing faculty members who have retired or changed positions.

Besides his many travels, President Bertholf presides over the President's Council which makes decisions concerning the academic, administrative, and social policies of the school. He also leads the monthly banquet of the All-University Council where student leaders can learn of university plans and bring problems to be discussed. This coming summer President Bertholf is planning to attend a Methodist Conference in England.

To begin the year, President Bertholf welcomes students at a convocation.

THREE MEMBERS of the Board of Trustees find some matter of university business amusing.

Board of Trustees

The controlling body of the university is comprised of thirty-six members of the Board of Trustees and twelve Official Visitors representing the Methodist Church. This body authorizes the employment of administration and faculty members, formation of budgetary and financial policies, and execution of expansion and academic programs.

All official business concerning the administration of the university is transacted at the three meetings held each year. During the rest of the year, matters are channelled through various committees, whose functions are to formulate, supervise and execute policy matters.

The officials intend to maintain freedom of education in a Christianity-oriented atmosphere which meets the challenge of various ideologies of the world. The Board proposes to moderately increase the enrollment of the university to prevent undesirable depersonalization of students.

To meet the increased demands on the university, the Board has approved many expansion projects; such as, the demolition of Duration Hall and the renovation of Stevenson Hall to house the School of Nursing. Future plans include construction of a new Munsell Hall, a women's dormitory, a two-story addition to the Student Center, a new maintenance building, an addition to the power plant, demolition of Old North, and a new library.

Deans

Dean Everette Walker's work is centered primarily in the academic areas of the university. This involves serving on a total of fourteen different committees. Working through the heads of departments and the chairmen of schools, he deals with changes and additions in curriculum, handles academic probation, Dean's List, and the addition of new faculty members. His office is responsible for keeping faculty members informed of various academic procedures and professional meetings. His job also entails working with the library and the registrar's office. Dean Walker also is associated with the North Central Association, the Central States College Association, the Association of American Colleges, and the Illinois Conference on Higher Education.

Dean Everette Walker untangles students' academic conflicts.

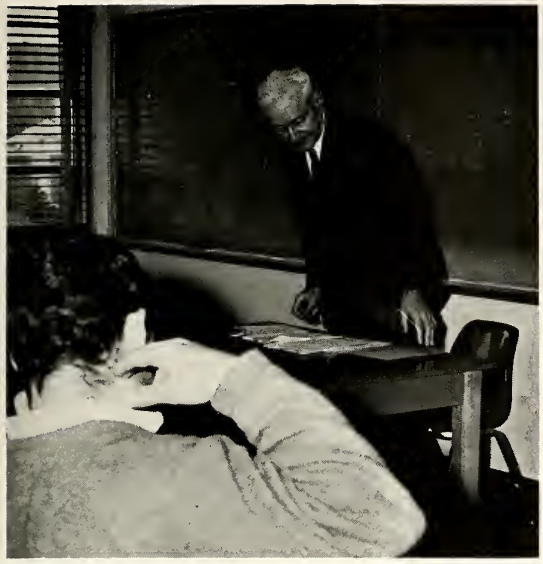
Miss Anne Meierhofer is readily available for guidance.

In addition to aiding students with their problems, Dean Anne Meierhofer fulfills her many committee obligations through travels, speeches, and correspondence. She now holds the position of president of the local American Association of University Women and is on the State Board of Delta Kappa Gamma, a national women's honorary. Representing IWU, she attended the annual meeting of the National Association of Women Deans. Dean Meierhofer is State Co-ordinator of this organization in Illinois. She also attended the state conference for National Foreign Student Advisors and is a member of the American Personnel and Guidance Association. Miss Meierhofer is proud to be included in Who's Who in American Women.

Dean Donald Ruthenberg, Associate Dean of Students, is one of the busiest men on campus. His speaking engagements include such cities as Springfield, Champaign and Jacksonville. Recently he presented a paper on "Student Creativity—Stifled or Stimulated in University Residence Halls," for the American College Personnel Association. He serves on the selection committee for the American Council on Education, and works as an Educational Consultant for State Farm Insurance Company. His name appears in Who's Who in the Midwest, Who's Who in American Education, and Who's Who in Methodism. Even with this wide range of activities, Dean Ruthenberg always has a smile and friendly greeting for students and is always willing to listen to their problems.

Willingness to assist students is displayed in Dean Donald Ruthenberg's friendly smile of encouragement.

Mr. Joseph Meyers Teacher of the Year

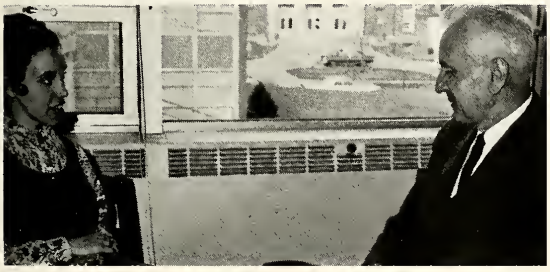


Mr. Joseph Meyers leads one of his humanities discussion classes.

Many factors go into the choosing of a "Teacher of the Year" which are not just the product of one year's hard work. By a joint decision of the faculty, the Dean's Council, and the President of the University, Joseph Meyers was the recipient of the 1964-65 Teacher of the Year award. The accomplishments that Mr. Meyers has achieved are numerous.

Mr. Meyers received his Bachelor's degree in English and philosophy from Xavier; he then entered graduate school at Princeton University and received his M.A. in English. After a brief teaching career in the English department at Xavier, Mr. Meyers left teaching and further broadened his educational background by traveling extensively. He has made five trips to Europe, for periods ranging from five months to a year and a half, and has visited a total of twenty-eight countries. Everywhere that he has gone Mr. Meyers has taken special interest in art, architecture, music, food, and local customs. During this time he also engaged in several businesses. He returned to teaching after eighteen years because in retrospect, he felt that it was the most rewarding thing that he had done.

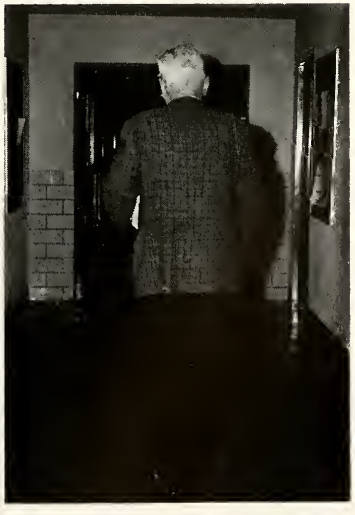
After five years at Purdue University, Mr. Meyers came to Illinois Wesleyan in 1953, and since then he has contributed to various committees. He is particularly proud that the Black Book came into existence at his suggestion in 1957 and that he has always been its advisor. This past year in addition to teaching humanities, creative writing, and literature, he has served on the Admissions Committee and the Convocations Commission.



Advising English students occupies a great deal of Mr. Meyers' time.

Mr. Meyers' library is a valuable aid.

Literature comes alive with Mr. Meyers.



Classes and meetings are over till tomorrow.

The Administration

The group of persons responsible for the business operations and technical procedure of Illinois Wesleyan is the administration. It attempts to maintain a balanced influence on the entire university. The administration, located primarily in Holmes Hall, is the nerve center of campus, and is open at all times to students who wish information concerning current campus policies, or future plans. New students become quickly acquainted with the Registrar's Office, Admissions Office, and Dean of Students' suite. If added assistance is needed, the Dean of the University is nearby, and the Placement, Business, and Publicity office personnel are always willing to assist in any way they can. The administration is a firm supporter of Student Senate, and students are encouraged to voice their opinions in All-University Council and on the other administrative committees on which students have representation. One of the obligations of the administration is to periodically evaluate itself and Wesleyan, and with the help of the faculty and students to avoid creating a static institution. Many administrators are active in civic affairs, and President Lloyd Bertholf and others travel extensively to obtain grants, gifts, and loans to facilitate Wesleyan's expansion. The goal of the administration is not to dictate to the school, but to co-ordinate it.

Mr. Daniel Oborn, Registrar, and his assistant, Mrs. Patricia Reed.

Mr. Russell B. Troxel serves as Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association.

Mr. Donald Eddy is Director of the Memorial Center and the bookstore.

Miss Velma Arnold, University Nurse, administers the Health Service.

George Oborn, Director of Development, retires this year.

Miss Mary Smiley, Director of Food Services, keeps students well fed.

Ed Alsene, sports publicity, relaxes with Dave Hughes, admissions counselor.

Max Starkey, comptroller, (l.), is assisted by Philip Kasch.

Administrators Control the University

Lynn Nichelson serves as the director of the Financial Aid office.

Glenn Dodds, Director of Placement, helps students find employment.

KATHY MCWILLIAMS, senior art major, works diligently in her studio.

The School of Art

Someday, somewhere, sometime, someone should write a case history of the life of an art major at Wesleyan. It would be an experience almost as exciting as being that very active and talented art major.

When a freshman art student enters this colorful and informal School of Art, he usually isn't fully aware of the atmosphere which he is entering until he is totally enveloped by it. Wesleyan's art school has a casual, almost irresponsible atmosphere in which a student may come and go as he pleases. The only stipulation is that he must work earnestly and diligently. In this type of surrounding, an artist may be honest with himself and work on an individual basis with guidance and instruction from faculty members when he requests. He may be sure that he will never be criticized for trying something new. Experimentation is an important part of being an artist that is emphasized. He must fearlessly and boldly try to create what best expresses his feelings.

The short term, with which the university as a whole experimented this year, simply gave a name to what the School of Art has been practicing for several years—the course called Independent Study. Students were treated as professionals and all upperclassmen enrolled for independent study in the field of art were given studios for the three-week period. In many cases the student saw his instructor only a few times during the whole term. This let the artist ponder over his own problems rather than relying solely on others' solutions.

Another point in favor of the short term for art students is that they had more time to study their work without worrying about academic courses. Also, the familiar routine of changing clothes at what seemed to be every other minute was cut down considerably. This spirit of independence was so emphasized that you may have even noticed some art majors working in their studios barefoot.

Another building for private studios was added to the School of Art this fall and is located at the corner of East and Beecher streets. Usually there are two or three students in one big studio. A student whose work is superior may receive a studio of his own. This new building was a valuable addition in supplying dedicated students with "elbow room" for individual pursuits.

Many classes are open to non-art majors as well as art majors. Wesleyan has an excellent art history department with approximately 25,000 slides covering all phases and all periods of art. This is one of the top collections of slides of this kind in the United States.

Art School Firsts

The fact that Wesleyan has a professional School of Art rather than merely an art department is significant. We were one of the first schools in Illinois to offer a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree. The faculty is composed entirely of working artists who exhibit regularly. Within the last twenty years the school has built up a permanent collection of paintings from such prominent artists as Philip Guston, Anthony Toney, Fred Conway, Everett Spruce, and Nicholas Vasilieff.

Wesleyan is also one of the first schools in the Midwest to establish a printmaking department. This is quite an accomplishment for a school as small as IWU. Thirty-three percent of our graduates go on to graduate school, all of whom receive some kind of financial aid. Their contribution to the world of art is a tribute to the faculty members and administrators of Wesleyan's School of Art.

School of Drama

This year the School of Drama had the largest enrollment in its history. Students came from as far as New York, Denver, and Tennessee to take advantage of the year's program, which included mainstage productions, senior shows, reading theatre performances, and a special guest instructor.

The academic year was preceded by a successful season of summer stock under the direction of Dr. John Ficca and Mr. Chaunce Conklin. Pajama Game, Come Blow Your Horn, The Mousetrap, My Three Angels, and Love Rides the Rails played to houses which filled the air-conditioned theatre throughout the summer. Although Mr. Ascareggi's illness was heavily felt, students took over his responsibilities and designed and built sets and made costumes while attending two rehearsals each day and a performance every evening.

The year's mainstage productions, under the direction of Dr. Tucker and Dr. Ficca, were Mary, Mary, the recent Broadway success; Shakespeare's Hamlet; The Bourgeois Gentleman, a Molière comedy; and two contemporary plays of the theatre of the absurd, The Lesson and The Bald Soprano by Ionesco.

During the short term all drama majors attended classes in either acting or stage craft. The school was honored to have Mr. William Needles of the Stratford, Ontario Shakespearian Company as guest instructor in acting.

Senior shows were presented successfully again this year. Seven seniors cast and directed fifty-minute cuttings from plays ranging from ancient Greek to contemporary.

New to the School of Drama this year was the Masquers' program of reader's theatre presentations. Under this program Masquers members were chosen to direct play cuttings which were presented to the theatre production class. The actors sat on stools and read from scripts while giving the characterization and interpretation that would go into a full performance. The program is exciting because it allows students to view and present plays which would probably not be done as mainstage productions.

School of Music Develops Professional Talents

The School of Music at Illinois Wesleyan University today is known as one of the leading music schools in the nation. The students of this school develop greatly throughout their four years at IWU. As graduates they are able to obtain leading positions such as concert artists, conductors, church choir directors or organists, accompanists, arrangers, and teachers in both high schools and colleges, public and private, in the area of vocal or instrumental music.

The purpose of the School of Music is to serve those students who want to make a serious study of music, in order that they may become men and women of highest ideals and usefulness as artists and teachers of distinction. It is felt that a background and understanding of music is also an important aspect of a well-developed liberal education.

The facilities of the school are quite adequate. Presser Hall contains twenty-one studios, thirty practice rooms, a small recital hall, and an auditorium with a capacity for seating six hundred persons. Available to students for practicing performance are five pipe organs, seventy-five pianos, and a harpsichord. Another feature is the music library which is a great convenience to the music students and faculty in giving them immediate access to recordings, scores, and other materials. The historical editions such as Tudor Church Music and the English Madrigal School are great assets.

Dr. Carl Neumeyer serves as the head of the School of Music.

Mr. Maurice Willis assists Chris Lester with a difficult passage.

Mr. Robert Bankert, Jan Hackett, and Mr. Henry Charles go over scores.

Mike Johnson has a taxing exercise to master.

As members of the IWU School of Music, students learn outside of the classroom as well as within. They are given many opportunities to perform, individually or in ensembles, on campus and throughout the country.

One of the major campus performances includes the annual Symposium of Contemporary American Music. At this individual students join faculty members and guest artists in performing music of many contemporary composers. More opportunities for public appearances are provided by public recitals, churches, and community organizations. Recitals are also given every Thursday by students for their fellow university residents. Various organizations within the department such as Collegiate Choir, annually travel through various states giving performances.

Music Faculty

In order to aid each student, experienced and talented faculty advisors are available throughout his years of study. These faculty members not only serve as advisors and teachers but also display their talents by performing in faculty concerts and recitals each year. For instance, Mrs. Anna McGrosso demonstrated her skill as a pianist at a spring recital which included several compositions by Beethoven. In addition, many of the music faculty are notable composers.

A member of the faculty is also responsible for conducting the European Music Tour, sponsored by the School of Music, which is arranged to include European music festivals such as the Mozart Festival at Salzburg.

THE NEW FACE of Stevenson Hall greets those of the nursing school who are fortunate enough to have classes in the modernized building.

Pres. Lloyd Bertholf, Dr. Edgar Stevenson, and Dr. Mary Shanks discuss plans for using newly remodeled Stevenson Hall after its dedication.

Stevenson Hall--New Nursing School Facilities

The Illinois Wesleyan School of Nursing is always expanding and revising its methods and techniques in order to meet the growing demands made on its graduates. The addition of new and more modern facilities made available on campus through the remodeling of Stevenson Hall has proved a great asset to students. Bright and cheery discussion and lecture rooms, nursing personnel offices within easy reach, a nursing library, a beautiful and relaxing lounge and a modern clinical laboratory make the lives of this year's student nurses not only more enjoyable but also more profitable than ever before possible.

The schedules of the 1965-66 student nurses were full as usual. While carrying a heavy load of liberal arts courses, there were also those early morning treks and bumpy bus rides to the "clinical area" for floor duty and clinical experience.

This curriculum does accomplish more, however, than just blearing the eyes of the hundred and some odd students, including several males, despite what one hears about all-girl classes. It provides the opportunity for the future nurses to widen their outlook to include all phases of life through a well-planned schedule of related and elective classes. The chance to follow a wide variety of interests and to develop skills in areas other than just the clinical practices of nursing, allows graduates to become better prepared to meet the challenges of the field with a well-rounded personality and a well developed philosophy of life.

Several programs have been adopted in order to realize these goals. New this year is a five year plan in which students may enroll. This program allows students to enter the nursing phase of learning in their sophomore year after only one year of general liberal arts courses. In this way, they can have many degree requirements fulfilled in this first year and then enroll in additional classes in the following four years that will add to their general knowledge and skill and allow them to work toward a specialized field of interest.

Weekly trips in the "Green Dragon", or the well-known school bus, bring St. Francis Hospital, Methodist Hospital, and Bartonville State Hospital within an hour of the Wesleyan campus and carry junior and senior students to the varied facilities and circumstances of different and larger institutions, besides Brokaw and Mennonite Hospitals and Gailey Eye Clinic in Bloomington which play a highly important part of the students' training. Experience in Public Health Nursing and the opportunity now available to some seniors to affiliate in various distant hospitals during the three weeks of short term also give graduates a background in different hospital situations and better prepares them to serve usefully in their future lives.

The delicate balance between the academic work which is an integral part of the program and the actual personal experience that is to be gained from actual clinical practice is the secret to the success of the Wesleyan Nursing School.

Miss J. Gordon advises Sharon Tjadenas as to which courses to take.

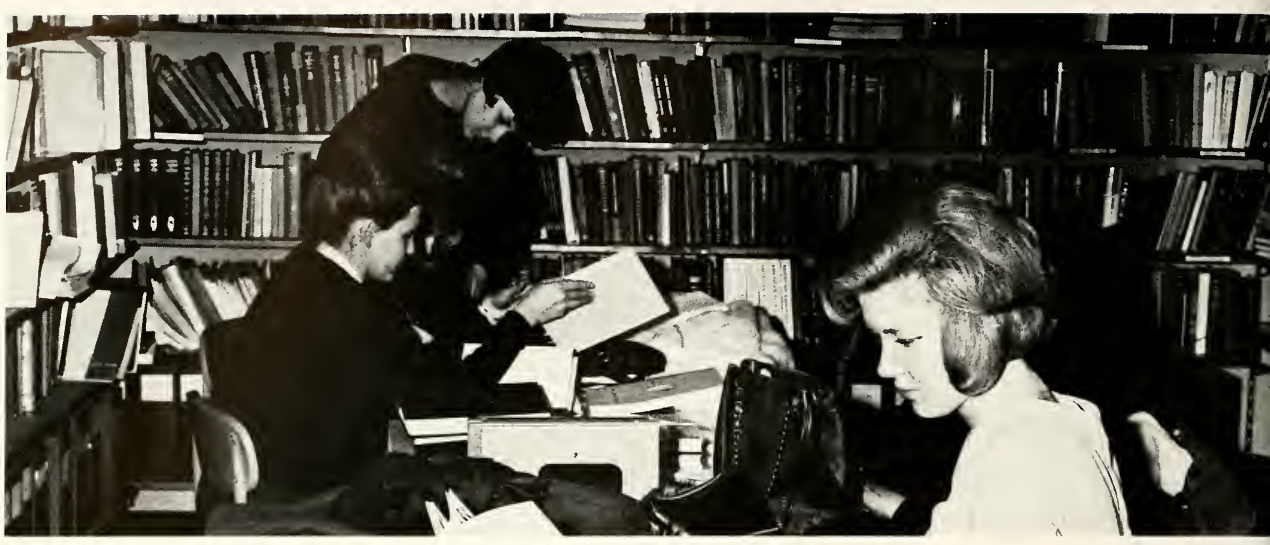
Well-Rounded Program

Another reason for the success of the department is, of course, the fine leadership of the teaching staff. Led by Dr. Mary Shanks, each of the faculty, herself a registered nurse, is always willing to give encouragement and aid to the sometimes befuddled students.

Good scholarship and good character are always encouraged of the students and they can boast some of the highest grade averages in the university. Alpha Tau Delta, the newly-formed professional nursing sorority on the campus, may prove an added incentive in this direction because of the 2.5 grade point average required for invitation to membership. Within the membership of the sorority many campus leaders can be found.

The life of a Wesleyan student nurse is not all work and no play, however. Permanent on-campus housing allows students to be active members of Greek organizations, choral groups, church activities, speech, Student Senate and its various committees, and a variety of other activities so important in conjunction with college life.

The student nurse studies, carries trays, enters into campus life, gets discouraged, learns about herself and others, readjusts and wears a smile, and always looks forward to the day when she may proudly wear the white uniform and cap and truly put to use her knowledge, skill and patience.



Elementary Education majors look over some of the many books in Dewey Fristoe's library, a center for materials of the education curriculum.

Education Department

The Education Department as well as the rest of the Illinois Wesleyan campus welcomes Dr. Clifford N. Pfeltz as the new head of the department. Dr. Pfeltz came to Wesleyan from Baltimore in September to replace Dr. Paul Ross and he is already very popular among the faculty and student body. He is already initiating some new programs in the department which should prove to be very exciting to future student teachers. Through the Central States College Association (CSCA), of which Illinois Wesleyan and Mundelein College are members, students from the Wesleyan campus will be able to student teach in Chicago schools in culturally deprived areas under the supervision of the Mundelein College faculty. This new program should be started in 1967 and be very profitable for those students who are interested in teaching in this area.

The seniors will also encounter a new innovation after student teaching. The last semester of their senior year they will return to their respective schools to watch the growth of their students and the operations of the school in their closing months. This new program for seniors will prove to be a very valuable follow-up experience.

The Education Department also welcomes back Mr. Emerson Miller. Mr. Miller has returned to campus after a year of study at the University of Wyoming for his doctorate and is the exclusive "property" of those students majoring in Elementary Education.

Next year, and it seems in future years, Dr. Pfeltz and Mr. Miller will have their work cut out for them. More and more students are coming into education at Wesleyan and the teacher program is expanding to encompass these students.

English Department

The English Department at Illinois Wesleyan University continues to expand and develop. Three new professors were added to the staff this year, Dr. William McDonald, Mr. Robert Burda, and Miss Janice Rowan.

As the department expands, there is a constant search for new means to increase the effectiveness and coverage of the curriculum. This year, for example, the two-hundred level writing course was changed to a course in creative reading and writing. Excellent authors were used as models to help students improve their writing style. Another change in the curriculum was the discontinuation of the departmental seminar; in place of this course there will be a required course in literary criticism.

There was an increase in the number of courses in American Literature this year, from two to three, and next year four courses will be offered in order to provide better coverage of this rich field of study. A plan to diversify studies in Renaissance Literature will begin next year with the addition of a course on Milton. The department also hopes to move into the field of linguistics next year.

Through these various changes the department hopes to improve its program, and to give the student a fuller knowledge and a better understanding of the English language.

Foreign Languages

With the continually improving methods of communication and transportation, people are finding that they need to be conversant in more than one tongue. Only by understanding a language can one truly begin to understand the culture in which it is spoken. Here in Wesleyan's Foreign Language Department courses are offered to students in elementary, intermediate, and advanced French, Spanish, German, and Greek. Oral work is emphasized not only in the classroom but in the language laboratory where all elementary students are required to spend one hour every week. The foreign language faculty were all very happy this year to acquire their own building on East Street where all the professors have offices, thus enabling a more finely co-ordinated program. The number of professors in the department increases each year to provide a greater variety of courses.

Mr. Enrico Gravagno files some German papers at the end of the day.

Philosophy

The development of a definitive point of view by which the student is better able to interpret the purpose of man in the universe is one of the major aims of the Wesleyan Department of Philosophy. Through the department's ample and varied course offerings, an individual is provided with a rich opportunity to increase the scope of his own particular viewpoint of life—not necessarily to answer but at least to ask many of the basic questions concerning man, his way of life, and his ever-changing senses of truth and values.

In a liberal arts-oriented education, the study of philosophy is awarded a position of almost unparalleled importance. It is synonomous with the greatest minds of any age, and yet remains one of man's most fundamental intellectual activities.

An increasingly more active, ever curious, mature mind as well as a more profound understanding of the individual's role in life are among the many rewards to be garnered from the Department of Philosophy.

Karen Bock and Greg Dell find philosophical pursuits amusing.

Dr. John VanderWaal, Professor of Philosophy, earnestly advises a student during registration.

Religion Department

It is the objective of the Department of Religion to nourish, interpret, and quite often reinterpret the Christian faith to a modern world at a time in which skepticism and disbelief are the key words.

This is accomplished in three ways: by offering a knowledge and understanding of the history, traditions, and practices of the major religious groups and sects, both occidental and oriental, in the world today, in order that the student may grow more mature in the understanding of his own faith; by providing assistance and advice necessary to the conscientious development of effective laymen in the church of today; and by counseling with those students bent on full-time service in the church by means of a religious vocation.

Dr. James Whitehurst provides atmosphere for "Religions of the Orient."

The office of Dr. Jerry Stone, Assistant Professor, is always open.

Dr. Richard Stegner will be missed after he leaves next year.

Speech Department

The Speech Department under the direction of Dr. Marie J. Robinson sponsored a wide scope of activities this year. Students participated in competition in Wisconsin, Nebraska, Ohio, and Missouri, as well as in Illinois. In all of the contests, the students gained personal distinction, as well as recognition for the department and the school through the excellence of their accomplishments. Choral speakers presented the chapel service before the Christmas holidays and gave an Easter service at a church in the Bloomington area. Speech hour programs included one with British competitors, and an evening of dramatic readings. Opening these hours to the public made students and faculty aware of the abilities of students in the department.

New this year were the speech listening hours in which all students in the department were invited to participate. These served to promote unity among majors and allowed non-majors an insight into the area of speech. Many students take general speech courses to better prepare themselves in their chosen vocations. These aid them to improve in the areas of discussion, debate, public speaking, interpretation, radio, and speech re-education. Some students were fortunate enough to gain experience in working on programs on the local radio stations, WJBC and WIOK. These activities are evidence of the departmental belief that an educated person should not only possess a fund of knowledge, but should also be trained in skills and arts of communicating that knowledge. Through the courses and extra-curricular activities offered, this goal is successfully and effectively realized.

History Department

The History Department on the Illinois Wesleyan campus, under the direction of Dr. Bunyan Andrew and Dr. Richard Leonard, has four purposes. These include: (1) to cultivate an historical appreciation of democracy; (2) to cultivate the ability to make critical judgments on current problems in respect to their historical background; (3) to promote a knowledge of the contributions made by prominent historians of our time; (4) to provide students who are majoring in the field of history with a knowledge of the processes and techniques of that discipline. These goals are accomplished through the wide variety of courses offered.

This year students had the opportunity to study history firsthand. The demolishing of Duration Hall made many historical items connected with the early years of the university available to all who were interested. During short term three students studied the problem of the American Indian and the Battle of Wounded Knee at Dakota Wesleyan University. This program allowed them to do independent research on one phase of history which had particular interest for them.

Dr. John Faust took his short term U.N. class to New York.

Dr. Donald Brown discusses grad school with Larry Bross.

Political Science

When academic changes occur within the university framework, departments also expand, offering new fields of challenge. Wesleyan's Political Science Department has developed emphasis on non-Western cultures by its university seminar programs, which will be expanded to include study of the Middle East, Eastern Europe, and the General Assembly of the United Nations. These seminars provide background for opportunities such as the annual Little United Nations Assembly and selected field trips. During short term, Dr. Faust will again offer a United Nations course, which is held in New York City, and Dr. Brown is planning a three hour course on the Middle East which will be taught in that area. For the student of academic excellence, it is possible to spend a stimulating semester at either Drew or Washington Universities, or to accept a local internship at city hall. These programs are designed to give the students insights into the complexities of local, national, and international politics, and to challenge them to solutions of political stability and cooperation. Illinois Wesleyan and the Political Science Department see the necessity for educating the future members and leaders of society to the art and understanding of politics, so they do not mistakenly call it the "last refuge of mediocrity."

Economics Department

Acknowledging the growing importance of economic theory in the thinking of today's businessmen, the Economics Department at Illinois Wesleyan aims to develop the student's ability to objectively and critically analyze the behavior of society in the production, exchange, and consumption of materials and services. In so doing, it offers courses in basic economic principles and various advanced courses in specialty fields such as public finance, money and banking, labor problems, pricing and distribution, and international trade.

For the student majoring in business administration or insurance, the Economics Department provides an opportunity to broaden his knowledge in fields related to his major. For the student planning to enter fields such as banking or public finance, the department's curriculum provides a sound foundation of economic theory.

This year during the short term a new course was added by the Economics Department. Entitled "Economic Growth and Development," the course explored the forces underlying the growth of economic systems and the problems and policies of economic development.

Mr. Charles Gardner is a new instructor in the department this year.

Business Administration

The Department of Business Administration is striving to provide its students with a conceptual and theoretical approach to the many phases of business, so that they will be able to respond to the unforeseen challenges of an ever-changing world. Many extra projects were undertaken during the year. Highlights included: the first business departmental convocation, continuation of the "Retailer for a Day" program, various class field trips, and the establishment of a business study room.

Plans are made for continued expansion in 1966-67. Thirty-one members of the Bloomington-Normal Personnel Council have agreed to place under their supervision thirty to forty senior business majors during their short term course of study next year. This will provide seniors with on-the-job training and illustrate the requirements and opportunities in the business world.

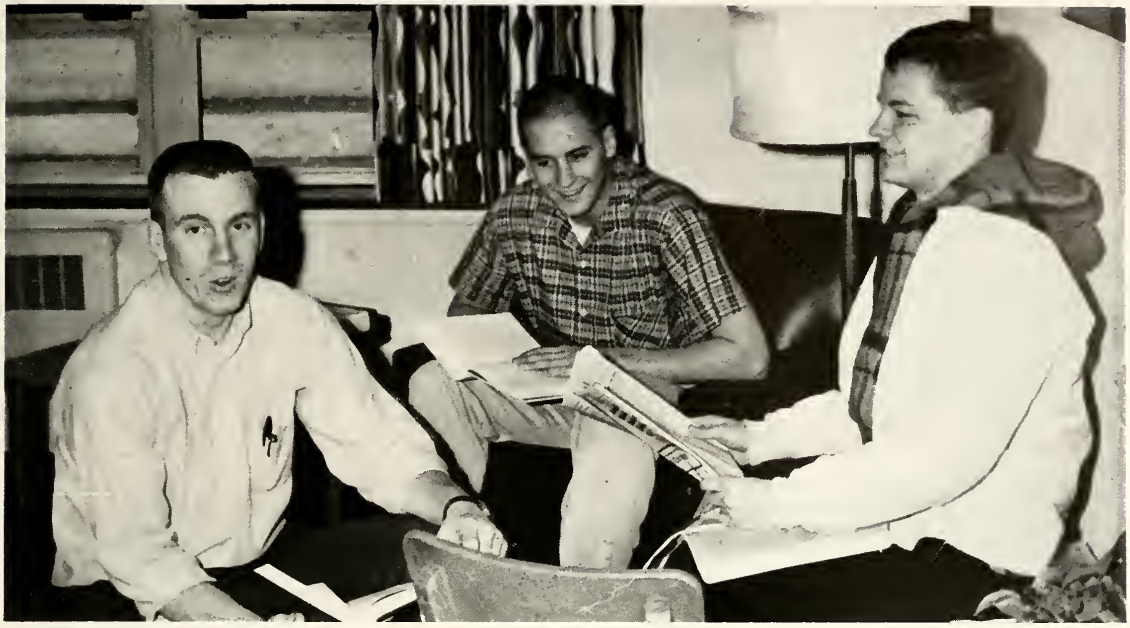
Oliver R. Luerssen is Associate Professor of Business Administration.



Several students find it helpful to compare notes before an insurance exam.

Dr. A. S. Yousri is Associate Professor of Insurance.

Insurance

Perhaps one of the most unique departments for a university the size of Illinois Wesleyan is the Department of Insurance. The existence of this department indicates the University's realization of the increasing importance of insurance in daily living. Because of its significance, the department serves not only for the instruction of insurance majors, but also supplements the study of other areas of learning.

Besides a wide variety of courses offered during the school year, a summer internship program is available to majors following their junior year. The student has a full time job in the home office of an insurance company for the summer. He acts as a paid employee and works under the supervision of a company official. This special program introduces the student to the many aspects of home office work. For class credit the student must complete a report of his work experience to both his employing superintendent and to his school supervisor. After participating in this program, the student becomes more aware of the applicability of his academic courses and of the opportunities in the field of insurance.

An additional aid to the insurance major is the business research room. Located on the first floor of Holmes Administration Building, the room is equipped with typewriters, business machines, and business, insurance, and economics magazines, pamphlets, and literature. This room provides the students with a quiet area for study, for meetings, or for informal discussions over class material.

Dr. Max Pape makes use of Sherff Hall's closed circuit television while lecturing to a Principles of Sociology class.

Dr. Paul Miller directs questions to Dr. Pape who is lecturing in another room in Sherff.

Sociology

The department of sociology, under the direction of Dr. Paul Miller, provides the student with an understanding of man in society and groups. The course of study prepares students for graduate work in sociology, anthropology, and social work. Those seniors with an interest in social welfare have the opportunity to work under the supervision of professional social workers in a selected local agency, giving them an apprenticeship in their chosen fields.

During short term the sociology department offered "Principles of Sociology" under Dr. Max Pape. The class was divided into discussion groups of ten persons each with a sociology major acting as "cell monitor" whose main objective was to guide discussion and study the group's dynamics.

Psychology Department

Each year a greater percentage of the Wesleyan student body takes a psychology course. Psychology is becoming increasingly popular as a major field and also as a minor for other fields. Under the direction of Dr. Tom Stachnik, the Psychology Department has had another active year. Dr. Harlyn Hamm joined the staff in the fall and has been the instructor for two new course offerings in the department, "Theories of Learning," and "Human Personality." The department acquired new laboratory facilities for the introductory course from a matching funds grant. This equipment is automated and is outstanding for an undergraduate program. In the area of the experimental analysis of behavior, research has been conducted on the effect of intracranial stimulation in rats as a reinforcer for aggression. During the short term, upper level students majoring in psychology were able to conduct their own research. In future years it is hoped that students will be able to spend the three week period off campus working on projects.

Through its program the department attempts to give a student a basic background in the techniques and knowledge of psychology to prepare him for graduate work in various fields such as experimental, counseling, or industrial psychology, to contribute to the general cultural development of the student and to aid in the preparation for such professions as teaching, social service, or public administration.

Biology Department

Lectures, microscopes and slides, dissection kits and lab experiments tested the intelligence and skill of the ever busy and often harried students of biology this school year. Dr. Wayne W. Wantland and his associates Drs. Frank Kulfinski, Donald Ries and W. W. Darlington led would-be doctors, dentists, nurses, chemists, and technologists through courses in general, cellular, and organismic biology as well as biophysics, biometrics, embryology, and genetics. Many liberal and fine arts majors were also introduced to this important field of study through this year's schedule.

The opportunities for advanced and independent research were facilitated by the open laboratories and ever expanding library in modern Sherff Hall. Private research on the part of the well-qualified staff has also been a great incentive to Wesleyan students to attain even higher goals in this advancing field.

Dr. Wayne W. Wantland keeps the Science Division running smoothly.

Natural Science with Dr. W. W. Darlington offers a variety of information.

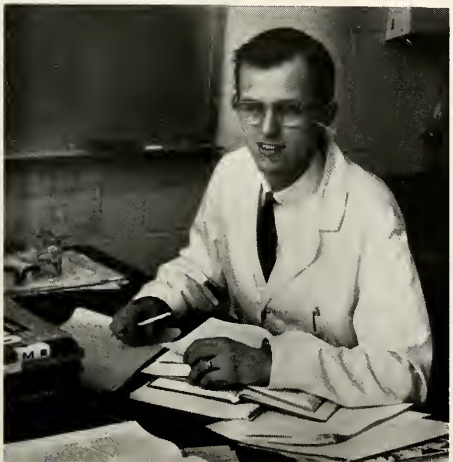
Dr. Joseph Collins can usually be found in research in his lab.

Chemistry Department

With the addition of a new professor, new equipment, and the beginning of a program of student study at Argonne National Laboratories during short term, the Chemistry Department is trying to offer a more advanced and well-rounded program to its students. Other steps taken in this direction have been the initiation of a departmental research program and the building of new equipment by both students and professors. Several new courses are also being offered and new teaching techniques are being tried to more effectively present the material. Thus, by presenting a well-rounded and progressive program, the chemistry department is better preparing its majors for their future work.

Dr. Forrest Frank has joined the department this year to teach organic chemistry.



Dr. Bruce Murray of Argonne Labs shows Ross Milley the essentials of Electron Spin Resonance.

Physics Department

The courses offered in the Department of Physics are designed to meet the needs of students in other fields as well as those whose major interests are in physical sciences.

Specific goals in the department for professional training are preparation for graduate study, pre-engineering training, preparation for high school teaching, and preparation for a career as a laboratory technician.

Under the new direction of Dr. Gary Kessler, this small but very important department at IWU has been doing much research and making many advances this year. They are presently nearing completion of an eighteen-inch telescope, and a spectrograph. With the aid of the Chemistry Department, a high intensity magnet to be used with optics or solid state physics has been purchased.

Math Department

The Department of Mathematics, under the direction of Dr. Evelyn K. Wantland, continued the new course programs successfully initiated last year. With the capable help of assistant professors Dorothy Banfill and Richard Daly, Dr. Wantland works constantly to fulfill the threefold purpose of the department. It aims: to give students some acquaintance with one of the older branches of knowledge and to instill habits of rigorous thinking; to equip students majoring in other departments with the mathematical background they may need for their work; and to thoroughly prepare students majoring in mathematics so that they may enter graduate schools and mathematical professions. The mathematics testing program is one means of measuring a new student's probable success and level of achievement for placement in college math courses.

It is the purpose of Wesleyan's Department of Physical Education to develop good health, an appreciation of general physical fitness, and the correction of physical limitations. It is also hoped that the individual student will grow in his democratic spirit of citizenship and his co-operation in working and playing with others. Many varied courses ranging from modern dance to fencing are available to all. This year during the short term a new course, "Independent Recreational Activities", was offered, in which students planned their own activities with little or no guidance from an instructor.

Miss Marian Niehaus heads the women's Physical Education department.

Home Economics

Wesleyan's Home Economics Department is recognized for its graduates in the fields of dietetics and home economic education. The department gives students practical experience in using creative planning and organization in meal preparation, garment construction, tailoring, house designing, decorating, home managing, as well as working with growing children. Main principles are taught to serve as guidelines. Although a student may not become proficient in all areas, she at least develops an appreciation of quality work and knows how to recognize it.

Various learning experiences are available: living in the home economics house at ISU for nine weeks and participating in the complete management of the home; watching children play naturally by observation through a one-way mirror; as well as intensive study of experimental cookery during short term. All experiences help the students become "better homemakers and more satisfying managers."

Abundant Academic Resources

Buck library is a haven for students who desire a sober, quiet atmosphere in which to study.

As the campus becomes redesigned by the progress of the twelfth decade advance, Buck Memorial Library is also expanding its facilities. The library applied for, and received permission to become a government depository, which has increased the volume of periodicals and books sent out to such depositories. Under the direction of head librarian Rodney Ferguson, Buck Memorial has doubled its stack area to provide for increased facilities during the interim before the new library is completed. The new library will contain three times the floor area of Buck, and will be constructed with three floors. Each floor will be divided into quadrants, including a reading and stack area. There will be carrels along the walls so students may work in a more quiet atmosphere. The library will be set up on the division plan so humanities, natural sciences, and social sciences will each have one floor. Being virtually windowless, the new library will have central air-conditioning. The plans also include a two-story student lounge for relaxation and reading. Construction will be of mostly concrete and brick, blending as much as possible with the present campus architecture.

Classes

Class officers are: Scott Anderson, Jr., president, (seated); Guy Gebhardt, treasurer, (l.); Penne Bouck, secretary; Jim Brown, vice-president.

Freshman Class

After freshman orientation and registration, the class of 1969 organized itself and began to work on several all-class projects. They held a work day on which members of the class donated time to local townspeople and merchants. The class earned about one hundred and twenty-five dollars on this project. The freshmen also planned an all-school dance in May and later sold plastic covers for the yearbook. Investigation of an "honor system" to be established at Wesleyan was applied in some freshman classes. Survey questionnaires were sent to about fifty participating schools. The success of the class projects was greatly due to the help and interest of Dr. Max Pape as their sponsor.

"Freshman Work Day"—was profitable for the freshmen as well as the Bloomington area residents for whom they worked.

Class officers are: Durrie Monsma, president, (standing); Dick Frey, vice-president; Judy Paxton, secretary; and Arlyn Freytag, treasurer.

Sophomore Class

The class of 1968 sponsored many activities on campus this year. They adopted a unit in Viet Nam for their main project. The fund-raising committee succeeded in raising over six hundred dollars. A donkey basketball game was one of the ways they earned this money. Also, one day was set aside as "Dessert Day" on which the Commons as well as the sorority and fraternity houses contributed the money, usually spent on dessert, for the Viet Nam unit. The sophomores also sponsored a "Best Man on Campus," contest. Their officers wrote a constitution, the only class constitution in Wesleyan's history, which was approved by the Senate.

THE SOPHOMORE CLASS earned money from the Donkey Basketball game to send some "extras" to the boys in Viet Nam.

Class officers are: Roger Taylor, treasurer, (l.); Sherrie Norris, secretary; Phil Ballard, president; and Bob Crites, vice-president.

Junior Class

The class of 1967 this year, under the direction of Phil Ballard, president, added money to their treasury by selling the government bonds that they had purchased two years ago as freshmen. Since the bonds had matured, the class made a substantial profit, and increased the treasury. Other class officers are Bob Crites, vice-president; Sherrie Norris, secretary; and Roger Taylor, treasurer. The senators who represented the class this year were Carole Reynolds, and Peggy White.

Senior Class

The leaders of the class of 1966 have concerned themselves more with student government and the broadening horizons of Wesleyan than any recent graduates. Academic excellence, and the perfecting of social and professional relationships within the University have been of primary importance.

The seniors have also taken an interest in the underclassmen, as evidenced by the fact that they helped the Freshman Class select a spring money-making project.

As they go on to graduate schools, careers, or military service, they leave Wesleyan's ever expanding campus in a state of incompletion. But they leave it the vital and growing institution upon which they have left a mark.

Portrait of Susan Connon, editor, on the day that two people showed up for the staff meeting, the photographers went on strike, the index was misplaced. . . .

Where else do you put the editor's favorite picture?

Editor's Page

In September I was an assistant editor; in December I became an editor. I was congratulated and encouraged by the staff I was to lead, but I was not wholly convinced that I was an editor.

I gazed at the pieces of yearbook spread out next to the Christmas tree over vacation, and repeated over and over, "I am an editor."

There were books, magazines, pamphlets and brochures all over my new desk explaining in detail the "how to's" of every aspect of yearbook creating, except mine.

Larry Wells, of Associates Engraving, kept saying that everything would be "fine." Henry Etter of the Publicity Office told me that I worried too much. Walt Punke from Pantagraph Printing kept telling me that this was unbeatable experience for later life, and that someday I would be glad to have it to look back on.

I was not convinced then that they were right, but I am now. I learned a whole new existence, a new set of values, and a lot about working with people.

To those who were subjected to the side-effects of my learning process, and to those advisors and friends who consoled and sustained me, go my appreciation and thanks. It has been a hectic, nerve-wracking, rewarding and unforgettable year.
